FAQs

How many item slots do I have? 10 plus your constitution score

How to get more slots? Buy a chest, hire a lackey get a cart

Whats the range of my spell? Unless specified otherwise, it's close (same or an adjacent zone.)

How to get un-poisoned? Antidote can cure many poisons. The spell remove poison can heal most others. Poison is meant to be lethal

How much HP do I have? Depends on class: fighters 8, clerics 6, thieves and wizards 4.

What happens when damage exceeds my HP? You are "near death." Any further damage you must dismember, and risk death. when you are healed, you will dismember a final time.

Change Log

What's changed since the last version of Yabec? The current print version is 3.4! Get involved with Yabec development on Github!

- New look, including new font, pictures, and print section order that more closely follows web layout.
- Included the Principia Apocrypha as a primer and DM aid.
- Class tweaks
    - Added fictional examples to classes.
    - Changes made to many classes. Knight and mystic have many new abilities. Thieves and clerics get bonus equipment. Hollow has been unlisted.
    - Due to the increasing number of class abilities, additional caviots where added to the cumulitive effects restriciton on spell casting, in order to prempt a d 3rd edition esk runaway.
    - Reduced spell lists on class pages. Full spell descriptions can still be found in the all spells section.
- Equipment
    - Added table based starting equipment.
    - Added special starting equipment for new parties.
    - Added new eqipment, such as banners, dice set, glue, iron tongs, grease, and mechanical clock.
    - Suit armor debuffs all saves against magic, not just magic saves specifically.
    - Added flint and camping tools to standard equipment.
    - Suit armor debuffs all saves against magic, not just magic saves specifically.
    - Added relics, historial objects with automatic research.
- Game Procedures
    - Removed travel minigame. Travel is done in miles per day, like other OSR games.
    - Added additional healing options from camping and downtime.
    - Added scars, made dismembermant less deadly.
    - Codified calendar time, whilst linking it first to game play, and second to real time.
    - Due to the increasing number of class abilities, additional caviots where added to the cumulitive effects restriciton on spell casting, in order to prempt a d 3rd edition esk runaway.
    - Reordered many sections, and added additional labels for increased clarity, or conformity with other rule changes.
    - Added vegetable grinder option to make high lethality easier for advanced players.
    - Mapping section has been removed. Now only a few short options are listed as part of dungoen crawl procedures.
    - Added vegetable grinder option to make high lethality easier for advanced players.

1. All Changes In From Verion 2

- Overhaul to economy, prices changed across the board
- Weapon damage and properties have changed.
- Reduced armor classes. Base is now 11.
- Changes in inventory. Players have more slots, rules text for heavy is spelled out instead of keyworded, and ammo is handled as part of the main item.
- Added trinkets and background.
- Added title level.
- Added multishiv abilitiy to thieves.
- Clerics choose from several tenets.

- Tweaks to downtime, added mundane research, blessing has a cost, crime grants xp, and others
- Clarified rules on slow, surprise, light, and others.
- Clarified floating disk spell.
- spellchecking by SKC!
    - Hireling inventory reduce.
    - Henchmen rules didn't state you could only have one until now.
    - Loyalty evaluation tweaked and moved hire in the page.
- Level up ability score increase limited.
- Added mundane research downtime.
- Revised dismemberment: its a d100 roll, con score is less significant, deadlier, added terrible scar. removed broken leg.
- XP score for potions and spell scorlls has been reduced to 100 xp, so i can give more of them without tilting xp payout.
- Revised magical research.
- Revised spells:
- Elves and dwarves hate eachother.
    - Wizard: -augary, +burning hands, +acid arrow, invis 10'r is 3rd lv.
    - Cleric: -detect magic, +portent, bless is magical weapon, greater cure wound is 3rd lv, +supreme cure wound
    - Druid: +portent, +acid arrow
    - Warlocks blood offering affects the current spell, not the next one.
- Added expert game features, such as warfare and construction.
- Tweaks to items:
    - changed function of slow weapons clarified. Next action must be standby. Exception for dropping a discharged crossbow.
    - fragile weapons degrade via a degredation die, instead of -1 enchantments.
    - unlisted item damage rules.
    - armor is more expencive.
    - forging is more expencive.
- Overhauled travel again! the point crawl rules are sill available here
- New pdf rending engine uses Selenium which fixes many rendering issues. A single voulme manual is now also available.
- Cure poison and cure disease spells have been merged
- Animalkin's claws become magical at 5th level.
- mapping section now favors the white board method as it is the most intuitive. The visual aids for the call method have been removed.
- Optional xp from freeing slaves. other sources of xp also listed as optional, though there'll be no change in how I score.
- added rolless variant combat
- added constuction rules
- Tweaked downtime options
- Minions overhauled again! See below.
- Saves are roll under, and there are now only two. Update you character sheet.
- Spell descriptions continue to be updated
- Travel rules overhauled to allow for camping
- Tweaks to: weapon stats, combat rules.
- Reorganized the pages and formatting, and added additional links and navbars to the website. It should be easier to navigate.

Rulings I'm going back on:

- Resting while not fatigued prevents the next fatigue. This is a reasonable action with analogues in clock hazard games.
- Resting while not fatigued can extend spells, but only when done before casting. This rewards player planning, and spells which would become op can end on a shift instead of fatigue. For the exact rule see both the hazard and resting sections

I. Whats Changed Since 3-0

- Renamed items page to shop
- Tweaks to travel:

    - Camping doen't consume rations
    - Added water path
- Changes to classes:
    - clerificaiton on fighter and animal kin
    - Added Animal kin yapper
    - Added telepathy, and realign to mystic, as well as implementing spell descriptions and other tweaks
    - High level dwaves can speak to stones
    - Reworked kobold. Now their gimic is gathering kobold.
- Tweks to minions:
    - Minion evaluation can raise renown to 6, previously 5.
    - Torch bearer restock and 2 slots. Added journeyman torch carrier
- Clarification on gambling
- Fixed various typos and formatting.
- Minions are replaced by hirelings. There will be less paperwork, and better balance.

Coming From Another Game?

If you are familiar with B/X, OSE, BFRPG or other OSR games, you are already largely familiar with Yabec! The design goals of Yabec are to be modern, and simple. Here's some of the highlights:

- Combat uses descending armor class and THAC0.
- Compatible with B/X math, but adjustments to AC, THAC0, and damage make combat go faster.
- Streamlined slot based encumberance.
- Copper piece standard.
- Health is calculated as damage up, not health down.
- It's a roll under system. Checks, attacks, and saves are all roll under.
- There are fuzzy "zones" instead of exact range measurements.
- There are more classes, and some old-school classes are given extra abilities.

- Players, rather than the dungeon master, roll monster attacks as a "dodge roll".
- Hazards are on a die roll rather than a clock.

Get Involved!

Yabec is available on Github. If theres an issue or a change you'd like to see, bring it up. I'm happy to discuss any aspect of this system with you.

2. Introduction

1. Rediscovering The Context Of Old School Gaming

Players and GMs newly discovering the old school style of RPG play might lack the historical context that rules designers sometimes take for granted as implicit. Many rules-light games in the old school style don't include much guidance on running the game. I imagine newcomers might feel quite lost, or have a bad experience running or playing them.

So I decided to compile some advice, borrowing from the effective, evocative style of "GM Principles" used by Apocalypse World and other Powered by the Apocalypse games.

These principles are primarily from two sources that are excellent in their own right: Maze Rats, a rules-light, old school style RPG by Ben Milton, and some thoughtful posts and vlogs by Steven Lumpkin, on his blog Roll d100. These sources are attributed using the symbols noted in the frontmatter. I've taken some liberty to edit them into a more cohesive whole, given them impactful titles, as well as expounding on them and adding a few principles myself.

2. What Is Old School Style Play?

A concise definition is quite difficult and subjective, but I like how Ben Milton characterizes it here:

> The more of the following a campaign has, the more old school it is: high lethality, an open world, a lack of pre-written plot, an emphasis on creative problem solving, an exploration-centered reward system (usually XP for treasure), a disregard for "encounter balance", and the use of random tables to generate world elements that surprise both players and referees. Also, a strong do-it-yourself attitude and a willingness to share your work and use the creativity of others in your game.

These elements were present in the early years of the hobby. At first, they may seem crude, cumbersome, or outdated. But many players find the kind of gameplay that emerges from these elements very compelling. They can invoke creativity, engagement, wonder and a sense of accomplishment.

The appreciation of old school style play shouldn't be misconstrued as chasing a sense of nostalgia. That can be true for some, but an increasing number of players who enjoy this style weren't alive when these rules were popular. And beyond simple retro-clone and rehash ruleset, there are many elegant modernizations, reinterpretations, and entirely new and innovative rulesets that foster this style of play, and even more that permit it.

For links to suggested games and more introductory material, visit https://lithyscaphe.blogspot.com/p/principia-apocrypha.html

3. Using The Principles

It may be helpful to think of these principles as rules that you as a GM follow, supplementary to the written game rules. When you aren't sure what to do in an uncertain situation, think back to them. They can help guide the game to support old school style play.

It should go without saying that they won't all apply equally to your game or a certain adventure, depending on its style, tone, scope and so on. They are written in a commanding style to be memorable, but take them with a grain of salt and feel free to ignore or break the ones that don't work for your table.

When approaching a ruleset with a specific playstyle in mind, it's likely that aspects of both will fight each other. But don't agonize over gaming philosophy before actually running a game. Every GM and every group of players is so different that you will need to try them out in practice. Ask your players how they feel about the experience, and make house rules, or change systems. Play in more of a messy amorphous act than a solid piece of art to be perfected.

4. The OSR And The Cardinal Principle

The "Old School Renaissance", or OSR, is a scene and community (or many overlapping sub-communities) of people who enjoy the old school style of play. As with any other community, it's composed of all kinds of folks sharing ideas with one another. Inevitably, some of those ideas will be strongly-held opinions. Some people have louder voices, and some are deliberately provocative. Drama, miscommunication, conflict and harassement can and will happen. And with any other community, it's up to all of its members to foster and maintain a healthy environment, for themselves and newcomers.

But when it comes down to it, remember this Cardinal Principle:

5. Your Table Is Yours

How you and your friends play games is not magically dictated by the opinions of others. No one gets to tell you and your players how to have fun. Find out what works for your table.

I imagine that if someone says you're doing things wrong, they mean well. They want to help you have the same kind of experiences that they find fun. But there are any number of hidden variables between their experience and yours. The principles are partially meant to help disambiguate what people mean by "OSR" and old school style play, and clarify the reasoning behind certain rules and methods.

That said, the OSR is full of incredible creative folks and an abundance of unique and engaging content for inspiration or direct use in your games. If you're not part of it already, please, take this as an invitation to join the conversation and share your own ideas! The OSR thrives on the new perspectives and pushing the boundaries of what can be done with these games.

In other words, the OSR scene is not a set of rules to follow, it's an ever-growing "Appendix N".

- David Perry

3. Old School Principles For Players

1. Learn When To Run

Lumpkin - Old school adventures often present deadly encounters that, to the eye of a modern gamer, may seem like you're expect to beat them. Learn to dig into the fiction to see the relative power of what you're facing, and don't be afraid to cut your losses. A party that drag away one dead body is a part on their way to a Cleric, instead of on their way through a monster's digestive system.

2. Combat As War, Not Sport

Perry - Don't expect encounters to be "balanced". Approach combat with as much trepidation and preparation as you would in real life. Nor are encounters self-contained. Think outside the box, outside the encounter area, outside the dungeon. Think like Sun Tzu, Think laterally or die.

3. Don't Be Limited By Your Character Sheet

Perry - Rules and mechanics are only triggered by what happens as established in the conversational fiction of play. To do something, describe your character doing it; if you need to roll dice, the GM will let you know.

Perry - When presented with a problem, don't expect to "use" your character's skills or abilities on it; investigate it by asking the GM questions and describing what your character tries.

Perry - Don't worry much about low stats, or roleplaying to match them. If they're low, it just means you have to be clever, gather information, and plan ahead to avoid dangerous rolls! Or forge ahead, foolhardy, and look forward to rolling up a new character. Just try not to drag the rest of your party down with you; it's only polite.

4. Live Your Backstory

Perry - Don't put much work into a backstory for your characters. Their experiences in play will be more real to you and your friends than anything you write. An early death won't sting quite as much, and a survivor will have real tales to tell, and experience to take pride in.

5. Power Is Earned, Heroism Proven

Perry - Unlike many modern RPGs, your character starts with little power. Your meager means and abilities at first level encourage lateral thinking to get you out of trouble. Rising to a challenge (or fleeing it) means more when their life is on the line.

Perry - Likewise, if you wish to play a true hero, don't expect anyone to salute you when you first ride into town. Prove your heroism through your character's actions.

6. Scrutinize The World, Interrogate The Fiction

Lumpkin - Discard any assumptions about other fantasy worlds, and be curious about the one you're playing in. Pay attention to details -about characters, the environment, social situations, and more. Take notes on them! Make maps of them! Information is leverage, my crafty friend. Those details can save your life.

Lumpkin - If you were in a room with a heavy vase in one corner, and you wanted to know what was behind it, what would you do? Probably drag it to the side, right? Looking for an air current? Lick a finger and hold it up. Judging the slope of a floor? Spill a little water on the ground. Engage the fiction of the game world as real. Describe the real actions you take to achieve the effect you're looking for. Remember, other games may have dice rolls to do this for you - many old school games don't, so engage!

7. The Only Dead End Is Death

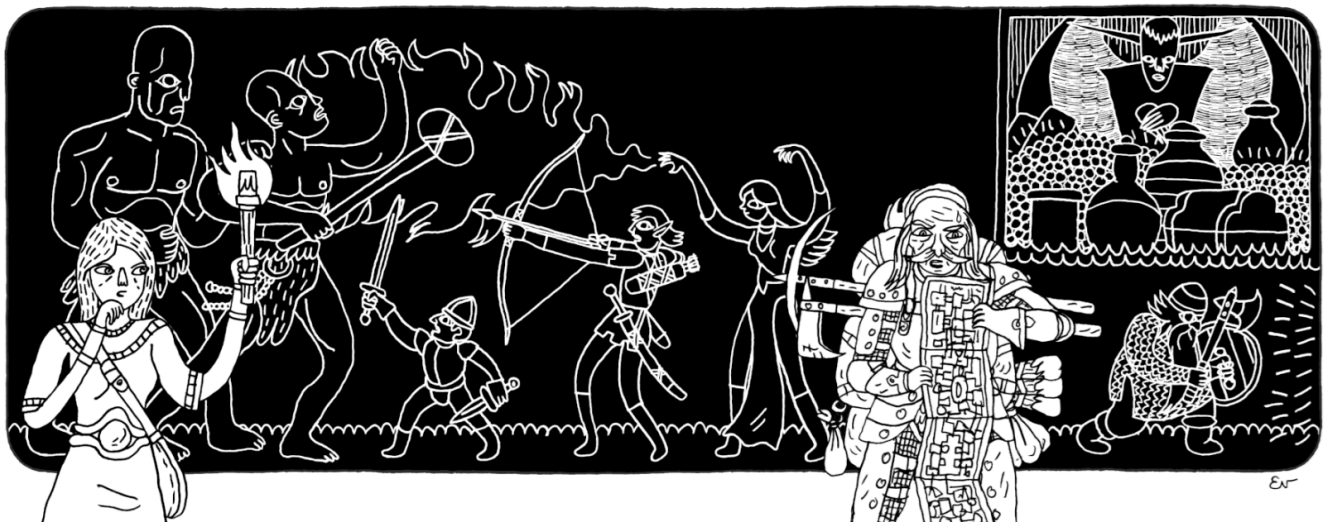
Lumpkin - That dead-end hallway may hide a secret door, or maybe there's another passage to investigate. The gargantuan monstrosity in the courtyard? Maybe you can get around it, or negotiate. A recalcitrant noble? Maybe someone knows how to get some leverage. Couldn't pick that iron door? Maybe one of those unidentified potions will help. Old school games have lots of hard blockers. When your first attempt fails, change tactics -the dead end is just the beginning of your solution. Often, digging into the fiction and engaging the world as real will open up new and unexpected avenues.

8. Play To Win, Savor Loss

Lumpkin - Everyone wants to succeed, and certainly everyone wants to play with friends they feel are aiming to succeed -but that may not always happen. Your characters may get turned into frog-people, lose limbs, be stricken with leprosy, turned into stone, cursed to burp up slugs, entombed in the earth for 10,000 years or just die from being stabbed in the gut by a farmer with a pitchfork. Learn to love the disgusting, horrifying, shocking, surprising, and even disappointing ways your characters are set back.

Perry - And remember, through play, a story emerges larger than any one character. You will make your mark on the world, be it an unknowingly misleading arrow scratched into a dungeon wall, or a crater where a city once stood.

4. Be An Impartial Arbiter



1. Rulings Over Rules

Perry - The primeval old school principle. Old school style games are often sparse in what situations their rules cover. There are often minimal, or no "skills" or "feats". This is a feature, not a bug. The flexibility this openness allows is a big part of the appeal of old school style games. Let players take advantage of this openness and try crazy things (and apply logic to taste).

Perry - When you encounter a situation that the rules don't seem to cover, don't get distracted searching for it. Instead, make a common-sense ruling within the spirit of the game and move on. It doesn't have to be perfect. Later, if you find there is in fact no rule and it could come up again, make a note of the ruling and apply it consistently.

2. Divest Yourself Of Their Fate

Perry - As GM (or Judge or Referre, perhaps more appropriate for old school style games), you are not an antagonist to the players or characters. Nor are you an author writing their story. Portray the world and embody its denizens genuinely, as they would react to the characters' behavior. Don't set out to tell a story, let one emerge from the characters' interactions with the world.

Milton - Be fair and impartial. Do not fudge rolls and avoid rolling in secret. This keeps the game honest and dangerous, and prevents any accusations of favoritism or railroading. It also encourages the players to manipulate and engage with the fictional world, rather than with the GM.

3. Leave Preparation Flexible

Milton - Don't prepare a plot for the players to follow. During the game, observe how the players deal with a situation, and extrapolate the effects of their actions based on what you know. Don't plan the results too far ahead of time; players rarely do what you expect them to.

Milton - Don't overdo the preparation! Keep your situation ideas loose enough that they can be adapted to the PC's choices and the flow of the game. Remember that unused prep can always be recycled in later sessions. After each session, ask the players what they plan on doing next and prep a few situations related to that. The direction of the game should be guided by the player's decisions, not the GM's.

Perry - Some RPG products are more like toolkits and than sourcebooks, helping you adapt and build a unique, flexible setting around your players, rather than being restricted to a rigid, dictated instance of someone else's.

4. Build Responsive Situations

Perry - Establish situations with several actors or factions pursuing their own ends. Let the players' actions affect this environment, and let the consequences affect the players in turn. Show the situations worsening if the players don't address them.

Milton - One way to create interesting situations is to draw a grid that maps the relationships between the elements of a situation and how they relate and interact, or how the party might intervene.

5. Embrace Chaos...

Perry - Listen to that capricious muse, the dice. Relying only on your own imagination can become exhausting and predictable, and can feel less like a concrete world to the players. And external inspiration and random results help you divest yourself of their fate.

Milton - Use random tables to keep the game fresh. The surprising twists that random tables add can bring an energy and mystery to the game that is hard to improvise.

6. ...But Uphold Logic

Perry - But don't use random results to the extent that the world feels nonsensical. If there is an obvious choice, consequence, or cause, use it. This can help maintain verisimilitude and let players make reasonable plans. It also emphasizes the surprise and intrigue of the instances of randomness when you do use them. You might also customize random tables to give a more cohesive feel to your game's setting.

7. Let Them Off The Rails

Perry - Feel free to let them know where most of your prep is, but if you expect them to zig and they zag, don't constrain or re-route them. If you don't know what comes next, let random tables fill in the blanks, then build on it between sessions. Find the excitement they see and embrace, too, the chaos of the players.

5. Get Them Thinking

1. XP For Discovery & Adversity

Perry - Many old school style games directly correlate XP earned with the value of treasure returned to safety. This is a convenient abstraction of the characters learning from the exploration and adversity of retrieving that treasure.

Perry - XP may also be granted for defeating monsters, but that doesn't necessarily mean killing them. And the XP value is usually much less than that of the treasure they guard. This incentivizes players to out-think monsters instead of defaulting to violence.

Perry - XP-for-treasure is like the fuel of the game's engine. Player decisions almost always hinge upon it. It's also an effective control knob. By adjusting the amount of treasure available, you can control the rate of PCs levelling. And you can tailor the focus of your game by adding value to exploring wilderness, saving prisoners, acquiring books, artisanal brewing ingredients, crystallized memories...

2. Player Ingenuity Over Character Ability

Milton - Old school PCs are very minimalistic because the character sheet is mostly there for when players make a mistake. Players are not meant to solve problems with die rolls, but with their own ingenuity. Therefore, present them with problems that don't require obscure knowledge, have no simple solution, but have many difficult solutions.

Milton - Examples: Cross a moat full of crocodiles. A door in a deep dungeon only opens in sunlight. Retrieve a key from a lake of acid.

3. Cleverness Rewarded Not Thwarted

Milton - Clever solutions to a problem should usually work, as long as they are within the realm of possibility. Be generous. If the action is unlikely or dangerous, call for a save or ability check, but only forbid a creative solution if this is clearly impossible.

Milton - If players tend to not think this way, present them with situations that are nearly impossible to tackle head on, and strongly reward even slightly creative solutions. One of your goals as a GM is to encourage this mentality. Feel free to tell your players that cleverness will get them farther than brute force.

Perry - Give them the benefit of the doubt when they've worked to give themselves the upper hand in the fiction. Don't shy away from translating this into mechanical advantage.

4. Ask Them How They Do It

Perry - Encourage players to interrogate the fiction of the environment "manually", asking them to describe the manner in which they interact, rather than eliding their actions via a roll or assumed character ability. You can always grant them a roll for a discovery or insight if they give up.

5. Let Them Manipulate The World

Milton - The focus of the game should be on creative problem solving, not brute force, so give players tools to make that appealing. When you give players tools, you give them new ways to engage with the world. Add elements that allow the players to bend the world to their will.

Milton - For example: rival factions to manipulate, potions with weirdly specific effects, items that can be combined or repurposed, dungeons with shortcuts and back passages.

6. Good Items Are Unique Tools

Milton - A good tool doesn't (only) increase PCs' damage or add an ability bonus; it does an odd, very specific thing that is only powerful when used cleverly. This turns every problem into a puzzle and encourages creative solutions.

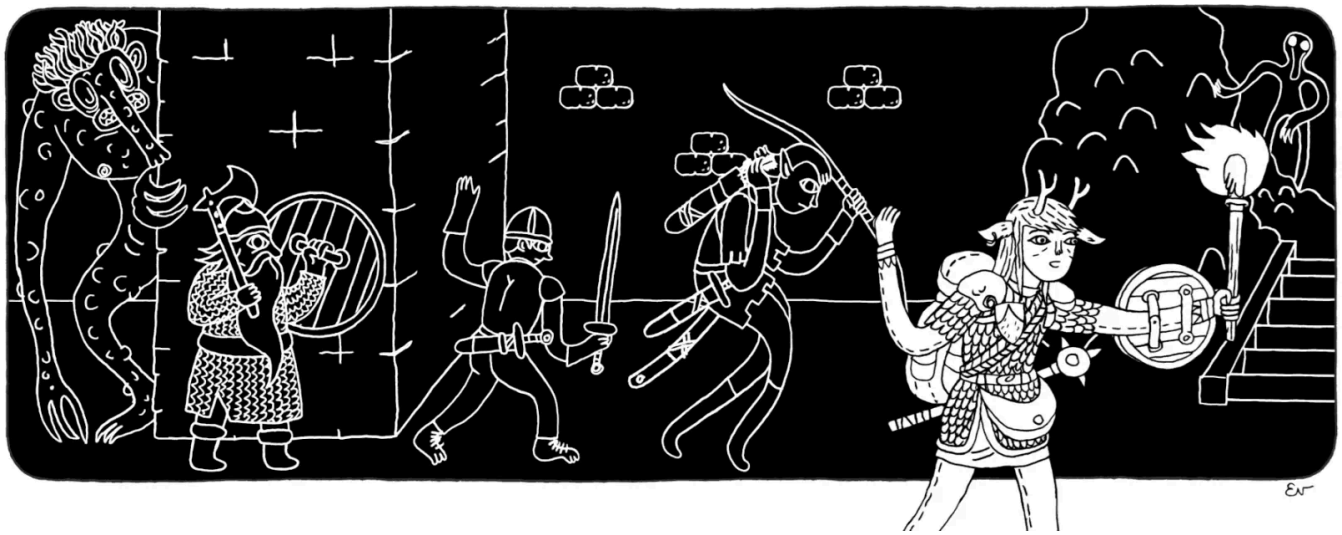
Milton - Examples: A rope that becomes as rigid as steel on command. A coin that lands on any result you wish when flipped. A bell that produces a sphere of silence around it.

Perry - Just don't let magic items become superpowers that trivialize every challenge. Give them a downside, an interesting cost, or a chance to deplete each time it is used.

7. Don't Mind The Fourth Wall

Perry - Don't worry much about "metagaming", or the dissonance between what the players know and what the characters know. Favor the ingenuity of the players over strict personification of their characters.

6. Build Rocks & Hard Places



1. Offer Tough Choices

Milton - Make the players weigh risk versus reward. The deeper players go into the wilderness or dungeon, the more perilous things should become. Whether because their resources are running low (food, health, equipment, light, etc.) or because danger builds the longer they linger, keep the players asking if it is worth pushing their luck just a little bit farther. The greatest treasures are always the hardest to reach.

Milton - Risk and reward are also at the heart of combat. The PCs' low health is meant to push combat quickly toward the point where players ask themselves, "Should I retreat to fight another day, or do I risk it all to finish them now?" The thrill of that choice is at the heart of combat.

Milton - Look for situations where all obvious choices come with a heavy cost. These situations encourage unorthodox solutions and lateral thinking.

2. Subvert Their Expectations

Perry - It's inevitable that players will have knowledge about common fantasy elements from pop culture. Inject common monsters, locations, and situations with your own unique twists; surprise them. This encourages players to explore these differences and solve new problems they aren't familiar with.

3. Build Challenges With Multiple Answers...

Perry - Avoid singular chokepoints to progress. Give them obvious, equally, but differently-difficult alternatives. You can also keep an extra option in your pocket that they have to dig for. Maybe it's obscure, but preferable. Maybe it's just as difficult, but more beneficial.

Lumpkin - "There's a magically locked iron gate the players have to get past...how? I guess one of the NPCs has a key...and there's a potion of Eat Metal hidden in room 12C." When you build your adventures, seed them with challenges that you know the answer to. Maybe the player characters have a core capability to get past the challenge, or maybe these to encourage players to dig into the fiction, and explore. If a challenge is critical for the continuation of the adventure, consider placing a few solutions. Three is a good number.

4. ...And Challenges With No Answer

Perry - Trust in your players. Let them surprise you and find answers to problem that you couldn't expect, and can't help them with. These can be the most rewarding challenges.

Lumpkin - "The deeps are stalked by a living maelstrom of ravenous psychic energy. If the players want to get the Golden Falcon they'll have to get past it, but I have no idea how they'll manage that." These exist to force players to be creative in ways that surprise everyone at the table. Be cautious with placing these as challenges critical for the continuation of the adventure (unless you intend for players to retreat and come back later), but sprinkling them around can surprise everyone at your table.

7. Dice With Death

1. Deadly But Avoidable Combat

Milton - Combat in old school RPGs is often neither balanced nor fair, and PCs should encounter foes far more powerful and numerous than they are. Players should learn to treat combat like real-world warfare and use ingenuity, preparation and underhanded tactics to rig the results in their favor. Encourage the players to outsmart and outplan their enemies if they want to survive.

Perry - Old school dungeons are usually not about being "cleared" of enemies. Dungeons constrain and focus possible actions. This makes it easier for both the players and the GM to identify, reason about, and plan around the problems presented. Potentially deadly combat is a common problem, one which should encourage solving in a variety of ways other than head-on.

2. Keep Up The Pressure

Milton - Whether it's through random encounter rolls when time passes, or because the dungeon is filling with sand, or because a PC will die in 10 turns from poison, keep the players desperate and on a clock. Maintain a tension between the desire to explore and loot, and the terror of remaining too long.

Perry - If the players repeat attempts at a challenge, such as a lockpicking check, give them a consequence, such as a chance for wandering monsters. Do be sure to let them breathe; back in town, on long trips through the wilderness, or if they find a safe dungeon room. But always consider a chance for trouble, be it 1-in-6 per hour, day, week or otherwise.

3. Let The Dice Kill Them...

Lumpkin - Remember, the GM is not an antagonist to the players, but their survival is on them.

Perry - If the rules and dice say that someone is dead, they're dead. Protecting the PCs from death can result in games that lack tension, and players who only solve problems with brute force.

Perry - Unambiguous character death gives weight to both the risks and rewards of play. Character creation is simple and quick in these games for a reason, and if they have hirelings or retainers, they have instant replacement characters. And don't worry about players not feeling attached to "simple" characters; they will after gaining something to lose.

4. ...But Telegraph Lethality

Milton - Give players the chance to think their way around threats and obstacles by telegraphing them ahead of time. No one likes their death to be random chance. When a PC dies, it should be their fault.

Perry - Or at least, they should know why.

5. Be Their World

1. Reveal The Situation

Milton - Don't hide important information from the players. If the PC could reasonably know something, tell the player and move on. The game is about making decisions, and players can't make good decisions without good information.

Lumpkin - The players will be probing your vision of this place for useful information. Put your mind into that world, explore and bring back what's valuable. Likewise, apply a real-world logic to populations and challenges, rather than building a carefully balanced sequence of fights.

Perry - Assume the characters have common sense, and mention potential danger when it becomes obvious. Don't make them plummet from a 50 foot cliff because the player said they would "hop down" it; they may have heard "five" instead of "fifty".

2. Give Them Layers To Peel

Perry - What are the PCs aware of already? What do they notice at their first glance? Which of those "first glance" things hides information revealed on closer inspection? How would players get that information? What's obvious, what's subtle, what's hidden, and what's invisible? Create layers of information for the players to peel back and explore.

Lumpkin - Some adventure modules indicate what would be obvious to a character to help you parse these layers. If that's not the case, take care to blurt out the secrets in a list of the contents of a room.

3. Don't Bury The Lead

Lumpkin - Keep details of your world gameable. Players should be able to act on the information you're telling them: "Her eyes are a shifting mottled green" helps players remember the NPC, sure-but "...and you notice she never stands more than one long step away from the table and its contents" gives them information they can act on. "The pillars are norately carved marble...the furthest one is crossed with a latticework of cracks." Your details should allow players to make informed decisions and take effective action. You can hide these details within your layered environments for players to discover, but remember to make them matter.

Perry - Let unknown mysteries become known problems. Maintaining secret lore can be fun, but until it's a problem for the players, it doesn't exist. Tie lore and mysteries into treasure that the players are already want to acquire.

4. Keep The World Alive

Milton - Old school RPGs shine with improvisation and extrapolation, not rigid plots. During the game and in between sessions, think about how the other characters and factions would respond to what the PCs are doing, and develop them accordingly. Your guiding principle should be "What are the logical consequences?"

Milton - Give the players a stake in the world. As the game goes on, players may accumulate a lot of money from completing jobs and looting treasures. Encourage them to use this money to buy property, hire retainers, or found factions. This can open up new ways for the players to interact with the world and affect its history.

5. NPCs Aren't Scripts

Perry - Give NPCs a motivation or concern that doesn't involve the PCs. This lends them some dept and grounding, as well as giving the PCs a lever to pull, if they can find it.

Milton - Milton - Treat NPCs like real people. Think about what NPCs want, especially in combat. NPCs want to stay alive, and will rarely start fights that they don't have a high chance of winning. Only fanatical NPCs will fight to the death; most will try to retreat or surrender if they are losing. Also, remember that enemies and allies can be made to switch sides if given the right motivation.

Perry - Use Reaction Rolls and Morale Rolls liberally. Reaction Rolls provide more variety to encounters, and demonstrate that combat isn't always assumed. Morale Rolls encourage battles to end before becoming a slog, or a slaughter.

Introduction

This section describes the very basics of how to play Yabec. The following sections will describe detailed game procedures for a variety of situations.

1. Overview

In Yabec, you play as an adventurer in a fantasy world. You may play a premade character, or make one yourself. This is your avatar, and the way you interact with the game world.

Your character has teamed up with other players' characters (PCs) and adventure. Your primary goal is to gain wealth and power. Great treasure is hidden within deep places of the world, tho many have died in it's search.

The Dungeon Master (DM) is a player with a special role. They are a referee, narrator, and show runner, and play the game world, including all non-player characters (NPCs).

1. The Game

As a TTRPG, Yabec is a sequence of situations. The DM will describe a situation in the game world as it is observable to your character, about which you may ask clarifying questions.

Eventually the dungeon master will ask you to act based on the information received, sometimes with a time limit. When you make your choice, the dungeon master will resolve it using dice or another game procedure, then advance to another situation.

Yabec is intended as a narrow-roll game. i.e. the dungeon master is more likely to tell you that an action automatically succeeds, or is impossible, comapred to other ttrpgs, that would have had rolls for a wider range of actions.

2. Scope

The general content of the game is of a fantasy dungeon crawler. Game sessions may often begin and end at the mouth of a dungeon. However, the scope of the game includes an overworld with many, sometimes hidden, dungeons, as well as towns and cities.

2. Teamwork

In most cases, the party acts as a unit, though many actions, such as attacking, are preformed individually.

The dungeon master should not allow one character to act against the interests of the group.

One player should take on the role of caller. They coridnate the party, get consensus, collate combat actions, and communicate with the dungeon master.

3. Time

It's critical that the dungeon master, and ideally the players as well, keep close track of time.

The most common unit of time is Turns, sometimes called "dungeon turns". They are about 10 mintues of in-game time. Each turn, many things happen in the background: torches burn slowly, monsters lurk in the darkness, guards go on patrol. The dungeon master will knock twice on the table to subtly convey the end of a turn, and will announce hazards that come with it if there are any.

1. Calendar

There is also calendar time. Unless the setting is described otherwise, begin the game at year zero, week zero. The game calendar by play, though it approzimates real time to the same degree that a turn approximates 10 minutes.

- A month is four weeks.
- A season is four months, or sixteen weeks.
- A year is four seasons, or sixteen months, or sixty four weeks.

The god of hexagons wanted to have it be six-fold, but the evil necromancer Duos the Younger meddeled with the god's sacred hourglass.

2. Rounds And Initiative

Within a turn, when there is a great time pressure, such as during a chase or during combat, the dungeon master will announce the start of (initiative).

During initiative, time is primarily measured in rounds, which last around 60 seconds.

At the start of each round, the dungeon master and the players each roll a d6. If the players roll higher or equal to the DM, they go first. Otherwise, the monsters go first.

Players order their actions however they wish, acting simultaneously, in sequence, or in some other way. Each round, each character can take only one action. Then they must wait for the next round to act again.

3. Optional: Individual Initiative / Willed Actions

Instead of annoucing initiative, the dungeon master will announce willing of actions at the start of each round. Players discuss, and then announce the type of action they wish to take. The initiative die they roll is on the table below.

Players who roll a four or higher act simultaniously before monsters. Players who roll three or lower act simultaniously after monsters.

Action	Initative
Sprinting	d10
Ranged Attack	d8
Thief	d8
Melee Attack	d6
Stunt	d6
Magic	d4

4. Checks

When you dungeon master asks you for a check, roll the appropriate dice (often a d20) and try to roll less than or equal to the target number. Tell the dungeon master if you succeed or fail.

The most common type of check is an ability check, which uses a d20 against your score in that ability. which uses a d20 against your score in that ability. For example, when strength check is called for, roll a twenty sided die. If your character has an 8 in strength, and you roll an 8 or less, you succeed the check.

1. Attacking

Attack checks (or attack rolls) have a have a hidden target number called an armor class, or AC. If the dungeon master has not announced the AC of a monster, simply tell the DM the value of your check.

To check your attack, take your AV (attack value) and subtract a d20. If it is less than or equal to the enemy's AC, you succeed in your hit and must roll damage.

2. Dodging

Dodge checks (or dodge rolls) have a hidden target number called an attack value, or AV. If the DM has not announced the AV of a monster, simply tell the dungeon master the value of your check.

To check your dodge, roll a d20 and add your AC. If it is less than or equal to the AV, you succeed and dodge the attack.

3. Advantage And Disadvantage

When making a check with advantage, attempt twice. If you succeed on either roll, you succeed the check.

When making a roll with disadvantage, attempt twice. If you fail on either roll, you fail the check.

You cannot have multiple stacks of advantage nor disadvantage. Advantageand and disadvantage cancel each other out.

Player Roles

Using roles makes play smoother and easier for everyone.

Taking on a role at the start of the session scores Lvl * 50 XP.

It's possible to split a role's responsibility between multiple people. For example, there can be a caller for exploration and a caller for combat, or someone who writes a session report keeping track of significant events and characters while another player keeps score and notes AC and AV of each encountered enemy.

If the main three roles are filled, duplicate roles (combat caller / exploration caller) or additional minor roles (quater master) can be added.

1. Mapper

Keep track of the layout of the dungeon. See Mapping.

2. Caller

Act as spokesman for the party. Get consensus on what the party would like to do, and communicate to the Dungeon Master. Additionally decide where the party will go this session, and ensure every player has what they need for the adventure (rations, antidotes, blessed weapons, etc). Can significantly speed up play.

3. Score Keeper

Keep score, noting enemies defeated, treasure recovered, and people freed. Additionally keep notes of significant names, monsters, and behavior.

Adventure!!!

The main phase of the game is dungeon exploration.

1. Hazards

The most important resource is time. Each turn, the dungeon master rolls a d6 to determine which hazard occers.
encompases a variety of time based treats to adventurers.

d6	Effect	Description
1	Nothing	The adventure continues.
2	Burn	Torches burn out
3	Fatigue	Become fatigued. If already fatigued, take 1d4 damage.
4	Shift	Traps reset, doors swing close, incapacitaed creatures wake up, near-death players die, etc.
5-6	Encounter	Chance of random encounter with a monster.

2. Searching

Treasure, traps, and secret doors will rarely be obvious at first glance. Searching:

- Takes a turn.
- Takes a minimum of three people per zone.
- Reveals non-obvious features, such as traps.
- Will always reveal everything it can.

3. Rest

Taking a turn to rest removes fatigue. If the fatigue hazard occers while you are still fatigued, you will take damage.

Ignore the fatigue hazard while resting.

A wandering monster will disrupt a rest.

A "rest", not to be confused with "camping" and "downtime", does not provide healing. It removes fatigue. See below for methods of healing.

4. Movement

Moving through an unexplored dungeon at a safe pace: move up to three zones (i.e. three rooms/hallways, or about 120'))

Moving quickly through a familiar area: move up to nine zones instead.

Moving across favorable ground outdoors: 3 miles per hour, while unencumberd, and having camped the night before. After eight hours of travel, each additional hour deals 2 damage componding.

1. Marching Order

While moving through narrow doors and halls, movement is restricted. The marching order is decided by the players. In general, only the front and the back are significant.

5. Encounters

1. Surprise

Players can surprise monsters when opening a door quietly, or charging into a room. Players are unable to surprise monsters when carrying a light in a dark area, and after making a loud noise. Monsters can surprise players when hidden in a room, or after stalking the players for at least one turn.

Surprised creatures take no actions the first round of combat, make a morale check, and attacks against them have advantage (the dungeon master may rule to have automatic hits).

2. Reaction

The dungeon master might roll to determine monster reaction, especially on random encounters. The dungeon master might include a reaction modifier from either the players in the front or a player initiating a confrontation.

2d6	Result
<=2	Attacks
3-5	Hostile, may attack
6-8	Uncertain, confused
9-11	Indifferent, may negotiate
12 or more	Eager, friendly

3. Evade

When two groups encounter one another, one or both may decide to evade the other, or one group may decide to pursue the evading group.

- If both choose to evade, nothing happens.
- If one chooses to evade, and is not pursued, nothing happens.
- If one chooses to evade, and is pursued, the chance of successfully evading is 3-in-6. If they fail, begin combat.
- If a group is surprised, they are unable to evade nor pursue.

4. Wandering Monster

The traditional method calls for a 1-in-6 chance every other turn while in a dungeon. To match theses odds with the hazard die, roll a d4 for each check, with a result of a 1 indicating a monster. I like to use a d6 with the following results: a 1 is always a monster. 2 is an omen, or a monster if it is a dangerous area, if the players have been especially noisy, etc. 3 is always an omen. 4 through 6 are safe.

Monsters appear 1d4 zones away.

6. Mapping

After the encounter (if any) is settled, players are able to observe the room for long enough to add to their map.

Dungeons are complex environments where it is easy to get lost. Keeping a map is essential. To keep the dungeon mysterious, it is discouraged for the DM to provide an exact map or to correct the players map.

Its recommended that one player take on the role of Mapper. See Roles.

1. Whiteboard Method

The dungeon master has a clipboard, a page protector, 1/2 or 1/4 graph paper, and a dry erase marker. They can draw out the current and near rooms. It is then up to the players to copy and connect the rooms. As the players adventure deeper into the dungeon, the dungeon master erases and draws new areas.

2. Flowchart Method

Rather than track the exact dimensions of every room, the mapper might opt to keep a general shape of the dungeon with a loose flow chart, labeling rooms and their connections.

3. Call Method

Instead of having the DM physically draw rooms, the mapper can instead work out a system of dungeon calls. by which to describe the shape of a dungeon.

While not in combat, the mapper can ask the dungeon master for a call. Each call should have an unambiguous meaning. The mapper and Dungeon Master should work together to establish calls that work for them.

GFC's video is a perfect explanation of dungeon mapping. This page is a written guide based on their advice.

Additionally, you may wish to modify the system to better suit your needs. Any non-ambiguous agreed upon system will work.

The Dungeon Master will only provide calls when the players ask, and only after they enter a room and are able to spend time observing it.

7. Healing

Healing removes damage.

1. Bandage

Bandages can be used to provide limited healing. Once an attempt to bandage you has been made, another cannot be made until you take damage. Bandaging also takes one turn. You may bandage yourself, and bandages cannot be reused.

Make an intelligence check. If you succeed, heal the target 1d6, plus a bonus from your WIS.

2. Magical Healing

Magic potions or spells can provide instantaneous healing.

When magically healing a near death character, they dismember with advantage.

3. Camping

Sleeping for 8 hours near a campfire, eating a ration, and spending a few hours in study/prayer/recreation: heal 1, or 2 if the ration was cooked into soup with a pot. Spell casters can memorize 1 level of spells (limited by their magic progression table).

Downtime

Enjoying a period of downtime: heal all of your damage, restore ammo/kits, memorize the maximum number of spells allowed by your level, and, if your dungeon master allows downtime actions, take a downtime action for each week.

The length of required downtime is equal to the number of weeks since your last downtime. I.e. if you have been adventuring for five weeks, your downtime must also be five weeks.

You must spend downtime in a town or city, in propper lodging, and pay your upkeep cost for each week.

4. Evaluate Loyalty

During downtime, hirelings, if any, adjust their loyalty score. For each hireling, make three loyalty checks. For each failure, loose one loyalty. For each success, gain one loyalty (max 10). If they have 10 loyalty, you can reduce it to 5, and gainone renown (max 7).

8. Light

There are three levels of light:

- Dark: The darkness is pitch black, and prevents sight. Imposes blindness.
- Dim: Allows some detail to be seen.
- Bright: Allows full vision, including details and reading. Disables infravision.

A light source casts bright light within touch, and dim within close.

1. Number Of Sources

To illuminate a whole party, one torch is needed for every five adventurers (i.e. PCs, hirelings, and other companions). If there are not enough torches, some members will be in darkness.

2. Infravision

A special type of vision had by many monsters, and some players: seeing heat energy that radiates of living things. Negate the effect of dark. When a creature with Infravision suddenly goes from dark to bright, they are blinded for one round, and their infravision is disabled until they spend a full turn in the dark.

It is not possible to read in the dim or dark with infravision.

9. Zones

The dungeon environment is split into zones. As a rule of thumb, each room and hallway is a zone. Large rooms or hallways may be multipole zones.

1. Guidelines

- Architecture: Architectural features, such as doorways, should divide zones.
- 40': Rooms bigger than 40', and hallways longer than 40', should be multiple zones.
- Even: Large rooms and hallways should have their zones divided evenly.
- Whole Number: Large rooms and hallways should always have a whole number of zones.

2. Ranges

Ranges and relative location are divided into four ranges:

- Touch: Striking distance.
- Close: Throwing distance. Speaking distance. With in the same or adjacent zone.
- Distant: Shouting distance. Upto 2 zones away. Farthest distance to make out details (in bright light).

- Sight: Anything that can be seen. Up to 3 miles in ideal conditions.

10. Doors

Eavesdropping at a door or corridor can reveal what lies beyond. Roll a d6, and add the bonus from your wisdom score. Some classes, like thieves, have additional bonuses. The dungeon master might roll this behind the screen instead. Make sure to tell them the bonus of the character listening.

On a result of six or more, the dungeon master will reveal sounds you are able to hear.

When opening a door, check your strength. If you fail, the door makes a loud sound. Otherwise, the door opens silently. Only a player at the front of the marching order can open doors; opening a door implies moving to the front. If there is not a door, a player can instead check their dexterity to approach silently.

Physically destroying a wooden door takes a full turn, requires appropriate tools, and makes loud noise.

Combat

Combat is a dangerous and costly activity, but inevitable for those who choose to dungeon delve.

1. Actions

1. Attack: Do either or both in any order: make an attack with a weapon, move to an adjacent zone.
2. Run: Move two zones.
3. Focus: Until the end of the next round, you have advantage on dodges, saves, and attacks.
4. Magic: Cast a spell or use a magic item. See Magic. You must not have been attacked or taken damage this round in order to cast a spell.
5. Stunts: Other maneuvers. See below.
6. Standby: Do nothing.

B.S.

2. Stunts

Stunts are grappling, tripping, or any other kind of creative option. Stunts may not cause damage directly, but can do about anything else.

How stunts are resolved is up to the dungeon master. These are provided as examples.

- Shove: On hit, 3-in-6 chance of moving an enemy.
- Flinch: On hit, allows creatures to move through the target's space.
- Sunder: On hit, deals 1d4 - 1 damage to the weapon or armor.
- Disarm: on hit, disarm an enemy if they fail a DEX check.
- Intimidation: With a creative threat, and successful CHA check, force enemies to make a morale check.
- Wrestle: Become prone. If the enemy fails a STR check, an enemy is also prone.

3. Attacking

Melee attacks have a range of touch. Ranged attacks have a range of distant (i.e. in adjacent zones or closer).

1. Statistics

The Armor Class (AC) is how likely a target is to be hit. The base armor class of an unarmored character is 9.

The Attack Value (AV), also called THAC0, is how likely an attack is to miss.

Lower AC and AV are better.

The Dungeon Master might either announce the result of the attack, or tell you the AC/AV so you can announce it yourself.

4. Damage

Damage represents injury, exhaustion, and wear. Yabec uses a damage up system, meaning instead of losing HP, you gain damage.

1. Slain

When a creature has damage equal to its HP, it is slain.

Slain hirelings and ordinary monsters instantly die.

Slain PCs and powerful monsters are near death. See below.

If a creature is slain with a blunt weapon, they can be left non-lethally incapacitated, until a shift hazard.

If slain by fire or explosion, all items are destroyed, and death is instant. Magic items have a chance of miraculously surviving.

5. Conditions

1. Prone

Attacks against prone creatures have advantage. A creature is prone until it uses a Standby action to stand up.

2. Grappled

When two or more combatants begin grappling, they can not move, nor stand up from prone.

3. Incapacitated

Attacks against an incapacitated creature hit automatically. An incapacitated creature is unable to move or take other actions.

4. Restrained

A creature restained by rope, manacles, or a hold spell is incapacitated. If restrained by mundane forces, a creature can attempt to break out of it.

5. Turned

A turned creature is overcome with fear, cowering when unable to flee.

6. Blind

A creature who is unable to perceive their surroundings.

- make all attacks, checks, and saves with disadvantage
- are always hit by attacks
- move slowly along walls, or randomly and slowly across an open area.

6. Exhaustion

At the end of the 9th round, and each round after, all creatures still involved in the combat take 1 damage.

7. Near Death

Characters that are near death:

- Can not move, take any actions, use spells, or use magic items.
- Die during a shift.
- Are automatically hit by all attacks.
- If they would take damage, they instead dismember.
- If they would be healed, they instead dismember. Then, if they survive, they stop being near death and heal 1 damage. If healed by magic, they dismember with advantage.

1. Dismembering

Every dismember carries a chance of death. Roll a d12, add the amount of damage you have in excess of your health, and add the amount of scars you have. Then reference the table.

Scars take up an item slot, and can't be put down. Most scars can't be healed, but may carry an aditional affect.

Reference the table.

Result	Dismember
>= 12	Dead!
11	Scar: Mostly dead. Until fully healed, you can only be healed magically, mumble, and crawl slowly. When you are fully healed, remove this scar and gain 1 renown.
10	Scar: Mangled arm. Can't use two-handed weapons nor shields. 1-in-10 chance: your weapon is permanently fused into your arm insted.
9	Scar: On the face! -1d4 CHA, -1d4 HP, and gain advantage on intimidation. 1-in-10 chance: loose an eye: embed a gemstone worth 100 cp or more to double the length of spells like detect magic, locate object, and see invisible.
8	Scar: Diseased. You're afflicted with a gross, uncomfortable infection. Each week, you can attempt a constitution check, to remove this scar and gain 1 hp.
6	Scar: Re-Brained. One random ability score is reduced by 1d4. One random ability score is increased by 1.
5	Scar: Gruesome. No other effects.
4	Scar: Near death experience. Gain 333 XP. Something from the otherside starts stalking you.
<=3	Miraculously unharmed!

8. Morale

Monsters and hirelings might have the morale broken. They check their morale when:

- first death on their side
- leader killed
- group reduced by half
- last remaining is bloodied (half HP)

The dungeon master rolls 2d6. The check fails if the result is greater than their morale / loyalty score. They surrender or flee.

9. Miscellaneous

1. Difficult Terrain

The first attempt to move out of difficult terrain fails. i.e. it takes two moves to pass through.

2. Flanking

In melee, if one side surrounds the other, the surrounded side has a +4 penalty to AC.

3. Friendly Fire

When a ranged attack misses, players make a dexterity check to void hitting an ally. Monsters and hirelings have a 3-in-6 chance.

4. Mapping

During combat, it's possible to reference a map, but adding to a map is impossible.

10. Variant: Rolless Combat

This alternate combat system doesn't use attack rolls or armor class. The feel of the combat will be different, and may be more appropriate for single combat. It can also be applied asymetrically. i.e. players make dodge rolls but not attack rolls.

1. Armor

Armor prevents some damage. Consult the table below to determine how much damage can be prevented each combat.

AC	Damage
3-5	12

2. Attack Value

Combatants with an AV of 15 or less deal +1 damage, with 11 or less deal +2, and with 20 or greater deal -1.

3. Attack Targets

When making a weapon attack, the attacker chooses a target. Attacks against the torso always hit. Attacks against another target require one or more ability checks to hit, but have additional effects.

- Torso: guaranteed hit.
- Leg: Requires a STR check. The attack also trips the opponent.

- Gut: Requires a STR check. The attack deals an extra d8 damage.
- Weapon: Requires an INT check. The opponent deals 4 less damage on their next attack.
- Hand: Requires a DEX and INT check. The attack also disarms the opponent.

4. Object Interactions

Each round, combatants have one object interaction, which they can use to pick or draw a weapon, drink a potion, stand up from the ground, or similar.

Clean Up

1. Update Calendar

If not done so already, determine the amount of game time that has passed. It's common to begin or end a session with a period of recovery, either in downtime, or camping for several days.

1. Characers Out Of Time

If the party travels without one a character, e.g. a player can't make the session, there are two options. The character can forgo any town activities to be retconed to the party's current location at the start of a session, or they can meet with the dungeon master prior to the main session in order to play through that time.

2. Divide Treasure

The Scorekeeper (usually the Scribe) totals the value of the treasure, and splits it between the players.

Try to split the value evenly, while dicing or bargening for specific items.

3. Experience

Experience points (XP/EXP) is a measure of a PC's power, and creates progression.

At the start of the session, the Scorekeeper will begin a score card: a simple piece of paper to write down scores (enemies killed, treasure found, etc) as they happen.

At the end of the session, the Scorekeeper will confer with the dungeon master to confirm each score, and establish the total amount of XP. XP is divided evenly between all players. Players who had a character die can put the XP to their next character. The Score Keeper will announce the individual amount gained.

1. Treasure

Recovering treasure from a dungeon scores 1 XP per 1 cp value of the treasure.

Potions and spell scrolls score 500 XP, while other magical items score 1000 XP.

2. Optional: Defeated Monsters

Defeating monsters scores XP based on their HD, plus a bonus for each special ability. E.g. a 2 HD monster with an ability is worth 25 XP.

HD	Base	Bonus
<1	5	1
1	10	3
2	20	5
3	35	15
4	75	50
5, 6,	300	250
7, 8,	650	550
≥9	1000	700

B.S.

3. Optional: Mapping

Exactly mapping a complete dungeon level scores XP equal to 1000 times the depth of the level. The dungeon master may decrease this (by upto 90%) for very small or simple levels, or increase it (by upto 400%) for very large or complex levels. They might also divide levels into regions, and award based on that.

4. Optional: Freed Slaves And Prisoners

Returning someone from captivity to their society of origin scores 100 xp.

5. Optional: Relics

Relics are historical objects, that come with research points. Scores 100 xp per point.

6. Optional: Roles

See roles.

7. Optional: Session Report

Anyone who writes at least 100 words about what happened in the session and shares it with the other players gains 100 * Lv XP.

8. Optional: Birthday

On their birthday, a player can claim additional XP equal to their age.

9. Optional: Prime Requisite

Each class has one or two prime requisites, which grants bonus XP for having a high ability score.

Characters with at least a 13 in one prime requisite gain 10% extra XP.

Characters with at least a 13 in both gain 15% extra XP.

Characters with at least a 18 in one prime requisite gains 15% extra XP.

4. Leveling Up

When a character gains enough XP to reach the next level:

- Update any improvements in saves, AV, etc. from your class progression table.
- Roll a number of HD equal to your level. If it is greater than your current HP, that is your new HP. Otherwise, increase your HP by one.
- Increase one ability score by 1, to a maximum of 18.
- Increase your upkeep cost by 10.

1. Level Limit

Characters cannot advance more than one level in one session. Leave the character 1 XP below the threshold for the next level. The remaining XP, at the player's discretion, be distributed among all other characters that went on the adventure (including NPCs).

5. Abandonment

A character of 2nd level or higher can be abandoned. They permanently leave the game. Abandoned characters can leave 50% of their wealth and 80% of their XP to a new character.

6. Funerals

1. Burial

Simple burial prevents the body from being reanimated. Temples will bury and bless the dead for free. If a cleric uses one turn to perform a blessing, the soul will pass peacefully.

When a character is buried in town, a funeral can be given. For each cp spent on the funeral, that player gains 1 XP, to a maximum of 100 times the level of the character being buried. In addition, all players that attend the funeral gain XP equal to 10% of the total cp spent.

2. Optional: Vegetable Grinder

When a player's character dies, if they have a funeral, their new character can recoup 50% of the dead character's XP.

Cremation prevents reanimation and is impossible to undo.

3. Inheritance

Money and items stored in town will be subject to a 15% estate tax to local government or temple, and then inherited by the next of kin or listed heir. Further embezzlement can be done through downtime.

4. Resurrection

Returning from death leaves you exhausted. Until the reincarned gets two downtimes of bed rest, they have 1 HP, move at half the normal rate, cannot carry heavy items, and cannot attack, cast spells, or use class skills.

Each time a character is resurrected, their constitution is reduced by 1.

7. Lost In The Dungeon

Should the adventurers be desperate for a way out, each player rolls a d12, adds their level, and subtracts the level of the dungeon they are on.

d12	Result
<=3	You are consumed by the horrors below. You die and your body is unrecoverable.
4	You are slain and rise from the dead as a wight. It carries your equipment, and slaying it will be required to ressurect you. The dungeon master adds it to the wandering monsters.
5	Roll for dismemberment. If you die, your body is somewhere in the dungeon.
6	You are possesed! The dungeon master adds you to the wandering monsters. When encountered, you will be hostile, but can be captured and exorcized.
7	You are captured! You party members can pay randsom of 100cp x your level, or leave you hostage in the dungeon. Gain several rumors from your stay.
8-11	You have survived!
>=12	You have survived, and the gods look favorably on you! If lawful: learn the location of a treasure. If chaotic: learn something about an enemy. If neutral: gain 100 xp.

Inventory

1. Slots

The number of items you can carry is limited by your item slots. The number of slots that you have is equal to your constitution score, plus ten.

Most items take up one slot, but some items are labled as taking up two, or more slots. You can fit upto five items labeled as "small" in one slot.

Coins, and gems can be stored in sacks. They are either carried on your person,

Ammo and other consumables ar often tracked as part of the weapon.

A person's body takes three slots. The rest of their items remain in their backpack, and can either be discraded, or added to your inventory.

2. Hands

You can hold up to two items at a time. A shield occupies one of your hands. Many weapons also require both hands.

3. Encumbered

You can become encumbered, and double your item slots. However, you move at half speed, and have disadvantage on checks, saves, skills, attacks, and dodges.

4. Standard Equipment

Its assumed all adventurers have some standard equipment, including:

- Compass
- Boots
- Backpack
- Common Clothes
- Flint (fire starter)

And at camp:

- Canvs tent
- Woolen bedroll
- Wodden bowl

If the standard equipment is lost, replacing part of it costs 20cp, and all of it 100cp.

5. Rule Of Thumb

One item slot is about 5 pounds, 1 foot long, 1 foot tall, and 1 foot wide. If an item exceedes any of those dimensions its likely to take more than one slot. If it is much less than that, it's likely to be small. A very small item can be tracked like coins, in a sack.

Spellcasting

The oldest powers of the world wrote secret patterns into the world. Adventures who learn these patterns can utilize a mystical pattern of trance, produced by memorized gestures and words. Though, this power is limited by the caster's memory. This is Vancian magic, and different than other games.

There are two types of magic-users.

Arcane Magic: is accessed through esoteric study and a understanding.

Divine Magic: is granted by a higher power, the favor of which must be maintained.

1. Memory

Magic-using classes have a magic progression table which shows a number for each of the five levels of spells. This is how many spells can be memorized at a time. They can memorize spells at the start of a session, and after resting in town.

A single spell can be memorized multiple times, creating multiple instances / uses. A low level spell can be memorized in place of a higher one.

Casting a spell causes the spell to be forgotten. Being interrupted while casting will also cause the spell to be forgotten.

Imagine the mind as a black board. At the start of the session, the caster writes meticulously copies spells from their spell book, writing them on the board using chalk. If the black board is big enough, they can write several copies of the spell. More powerful casters have bigger black boards.
To cast the spell, the caster erases it. If they're interrupted, they've already lost part of the spell.

1. Arcane Memorization

When arcane magic-users memorize, the chose spells from their spell books. See below. They must also choose whether to memorize the normal or reversed version of a spell.

2. Divine Memorization

Divine magic-users pray to receive memory of the spell (a lesser messanger spirit writes on the black board). They must maintain favor with their deity. See below.

They may chose whether to reverse it at the time of casting, by preforming the spell backwards.

2. Casting Limitations

Spells are cast by reciting a special words and gestures. There are several limitations on these actions:

1. Freedom: A magic-user must be able to move and speak freely.
2. Line of Sight: The target of a spell must be visible to the caster.
3. Range: Spell effects are limited to close and touch, unless specified otherwise.
4. Movement: The spell caster must be standing still during the casting.
5. Time: Spell-casting takes or one round. If interrupted (e.g. attacked), the spell is wasted.
6. Unwilling: When the target of any spell is unwilling, they may attempt a magic save. If the spell targets a touched creature, instead the caster must hit them. Some spells (e.g. magic missle) specify differently.
7. Quiet: Casting creates quiet noise. Casting is impossible in areas of magical silence.
8. Material:If the spell refers to a material componet, e.g. chalk, the caster must have it on hand in order to cast the spell.
9. Fatigue: A magic user can not cast spells while fatigued. Some spells last until fatigued. (resting can extend these spells only before casting).

10. No Cumulative effects: Multiple spells cannot be used to increase the same ability. Spells cannot be used to increase the same ability as a class skill. If the effects are both positive, or both negative, use only the stronger effect. If the effects are opposite, see opposite effect and higher level below. (spells can stack with the effects of magic items). e.g The AV bonus from bless will have no effect on a character already affected by empower armor, or on a bezerking fighter.
11. Resistence: Some creatures have a % chance, in addition to their save, of not being affected by spells and other magical effects.
12. Opposite Effects: When two spells have contridictory effects, spells will be neutralized by spells of a higher level (e.g. continual darkness neutralizes light). If the spells are the same level, than the higher caster's spell wins out.
13. Higher Level: Spells resist being disrupted by casters five or more levels power than the level of the original caster. e.g. a 5th level caster's knock is ineffective against a 10th level caster's arcane lock.

3. Spell Lists

Each spell-casting class has a limited number of spells it can learn and use. If a spell isn't on your spell list, you can't learn that spell, nor use spell scrolls of that spell.

The same spell may be different levels for different casting classes.

4. Concentration

Some spells last for as long as you can concentrate. Various actions will break concentration:

- Attacking or being hit
- Taking damage
- Using magic items
- Failing a save
- Sleeping
- Being surprised

Full concentration also imposes bad and requires closing your eyes.

1. Breaking Concentration

If a spell requires concentration, breaking concentration will end the spell. This deals damage equal to the spells level to the caster, or thrice that if full concentration.

5. Deity Disfavor

Divine magic-users must maintain favor with their god. When a divine magic-user breaks thei tenants, or casts a spell against their alignment, they may be sent to court.

1. Alignment

A divine spell-caster's alignment should be the same as their deity.

Chaos favors reversed spells, and Law favors unreversed. Neutral will choose their favor for that session when memorizing. Casting the wrong orientation of spell will risk disfavor if done without cause.

Spells without a reversed version are not subject to this.

2. Court

After potentially incurring disfavor (i.e. after combat has finished), a divine magic-user will be psychically transported to court. They have two options:

Plead Guilty: 1-in-6 chance of not being disfavored.

Plead not-guilty: Roll 3d6. If there's triples, or the total is less than or equal to your level: not disfavored.

3. Penalties

Normally, divine magic-users receive any spell they ask for from their spell list. With disfavor, for each spell memorized roll a d6. There is a chance they'll receive a random spell, or no spell.

Disfavors	Normal	Random	None
1	1-4	5-6	-
2	1	2-5	6
3	-	1-4	5-6
≥4	-	-	1-6

If disfavored while outside, there is a 1-in-10 chance to be struck by lightening.

4. Forgiveness

Clerics can forgive disfavor through downtime, or through preforming a quest for a temple of their alighnment or diety.

6. Spell Books

Arcane spellcasters begin the game with a spell book in addition to their other items.

Spell books take up 1 item slot, and can contain up to five levels of spell. That is, 1 1 1 1 1, 2 2 1, 3 2, 3 1 1, 4 1, or 5. To have more spells, additional spell books must be purchased.

You must have access to your spell book while memorizing.

Each level up, arcane spellcasters may add another spell from their spell list. To add more spells, or duplicate spell books, see magical research downtime.

7. Charms

Some spells are described as charmed. These spells have discrete gestures and signs, that can be preformed in conversation without recognition from an untrained eye.

Some creatures, such as fey, are immune to charms.

8. Resurrection

Being brought back from the dead is an ordeal. It's impossible if the body has bene cremated, or if the soul is imprisoned. After brought back, the constitution score is reduced by 1d4, and they are extremely frail for two weeks, having 1 hit point, and being unable to cast spells.

Negotiation

1. When To Negotiate

Negotiation does not change an NPC's character. Instead, players convince an NPC that a certain course of action, is actually in character.

- Plausible request. Players need to write this down.
- NPC has reason not to immediately support the players.
- NPC wants to negotiate.

2. Statistics

The NPC has four stats: interest, patience, motivation, and pitfall.

Interest ranges from 0 to 5. If interest reaches 5, the NPC makes an offer. If interest reaches 0, the NPC ends the negotiation without an offer.

Patience ranges from 0 to 5, and can only be reduced. When patience reaches 0, the NPC makes a final offer.

The dungeon master uses this table to determine the starting stats.

Attitude	Interest	Patience
Hostile	1	2
Neutral	2	3
Friendly	3	4

When an argument appeals to a motivation without mentioning a pitfall, the result gets better. When it appeals to a pitfall, it gets worse.

Each NPC will have about three motivations and about two pitfalls.

1. Benevolence
2. Discovery
3. Freedom
4. Greed
5. Higher Authority
6. Justice
7. Legacy
8. Peace
9. Power
10. Protection
11. Revelry
12. Vengeance

B.S.

3. Discovering Motivation (And Pitfalls)

A player can attempt a wisdom or intelligence check to check a particular motivation. If they succeed, the dungeon master will confirm whether it is a motivation, pitfall, or neither. However, if they fail, reduce patience by one. Once the players make this check, they can not do so again until they make an argument

An NPC with interest 3 or more may hint at their motivations if asked.

Outside of negotiation can interrogate close friends, or otherwise preform recognisance.

4. Arguments

Players must make a full argument the NPC; that is, what the NPC should do, and why.

The dungeon master will determine if this appealed to any motivations or pitfalls.

If it appeals to a pitfall, the NPC looses one patience AND one interest.

Otherwise, one player will make a wisdom or charisma check. Compare the result on the table.

-	Motivation	Normal
Success	+1 interest.	+1 interest, -1 patience.
Failure	+1 interest, -1 patience.	-1 patience

If the argument contains a lie, and it fails to increase interest, the NPC catches it and is offended, loosing an additional patience.

5. Offers

After making an argument the NPC makes an offer based on their interest.

Interest	Offer
0	No, and...
1	No.
2	No, but...
3	Yes, but...
4	Yes.
5	Yes, and...

Keep Going?

If the NPC has remaining patience, and their interest is between 1 and 4, the players can choose to continue the negotiation, or accept the offer as is.

1. Hacking Negotation

The negotation framework can be hacked to suit other social situations. For example, to model an interrogation, each agrument is a agument as to why the subject should reveal answer a question, and when patience reaches zero, they are unwilling to reveal any further info.

War-Machine

This system abstracts armies into forces, and assumes that troop quality, terrain, and luck can affect the outcome of the battle. It also assumes that characters know how to fight; i.e. players to do not need intimate knowlage of war tactics.

A force is commanded by a single leader, often a player character. There may be secondary leaders called officers. The rest of the fighting persons are called troops.

1. Summary

1. When a force is assembled, calculate the Force Rating (FR).
2. When a battle begins, calculate the Battle Rating (BR).
3. Roll the dice.
4. Apply the combat results.

2. Force Rating

Five things affect the force rating: leadership, experience, training, equipment, and magic. Start from zero, and add each bonus to the total.

Round down at the end of all the calculation.

1. Add the level of the leader.
2. If the sum of their intelligence, wisdom, and charisma is at least 40, add +4.
3. If at least 1% of the force is 9th level or higher, asside from the leader, add +2 per 1%.
4. If there is at least one officer per 40 troups, add thrice their average level / HD.
5. Add twice the average level / HD of the troops.
6. Add +1 per victory, and -1 per rout, in the last ten years (max +/-10).
7. Add +1 per week of training this year (max +20).
8. Add 10 if the leader doubles the force's cost to upgrade their weapons.
9. If the troops are at least 90% elves, dwarves, or similar fantastic creatures, add 15.
10. If there are monster troups with two or more special abilities (astrisks), than add 2 for each 1% of the force with two or more special abilities.

Increase the FR by 10% for each of the following:

1. 20% is mounted.
2. 50% is mounted.
3. 20% is can fire missiles.
4. 1% has magic abilities, such as spells, magic items, breath weapon, regeneration, etc.
5. 20% has magic abilities.
6. 100% has magic abilities.
7. 1% can fly.
8. 20% can fly.

3. Calculate The Battle Force

The BF represents the conditions of a particular battle. It is equal to the FR, plus the following bonuses:

1. If the force outnumbers it's opponet by at least 1.5:1, add 10 times the ratio.
2. If they are in in their dominion, or the dominion of their liege, add 10
3. If they have beaten this foe before, add 10
4. If they are surprised, subtract 30.
5. If an allied or accompanying force has been routed, subtract 10.
6. If on the high ground, add 20.
7. If defending a point, add 10. If defending a narrow defile, pass, or bridge, add 50 instead.
8. If on favored terrain (e.g. dwarves in mountains), add 20.
9. If attacking at night and has infravision, +20.
10. If immune to enemy attacks, add 150. If just 1% is immune to enemey attacks, add 50.
11. If fatigued, subtract 10.
12. If very fatigued, subtract 30.

4. Roll The Dice

Each side rolls d100 and adds it to their BF. Whosevere total is higher wins the battle.

5. Battle Results

The difference in the final BFs determines the results.

Difference	Casualties	Fatigue	Location
	W : L	W : L	W : L
1-8	0 : 10%	- : -	A : R
9-15	0 : 20%	- : -	A : R
16-24	10% : 20%	- : yes	A : R
25-40	20% : 30%	yes : very	A : R+1
41-60	20% : 40%	yes : very	A+1 : R+2
61-80	30% : 50%	yes : very	A+2 : R+3
81-100	20% : 60%	yes : Rout	A+3 : Rout
≥101	10% : 70%	- : -	A+4 : Rout

- W: Winner
- L: Loser
- A: Advance a terrain unit.
- R: Retreat a terrain unit.

Caualties: First calculate the total number of casualties, round up. Half of them die outright. If retreating, the opposing army can choose to kill, take prisoner, or allow the injured to flee. Any surviving injured can return to action in 1d4 months.

Fatigue: a force will remain fatigued for 1d4 days. A very fatigued force will become regular fatigued in 1d4 days. A fatigued force that becomes fatigued has its resting time reset (minimum 1 day extra).

Rout: The force seases to exist. Any survivors find their way home 1d10 weeks later.

6. Siege

When a force dells in a fortress or similar defencive structure, a siege begins.

At any time, the defending force can venture from the fortress, and have a normal battle, possibly even catching the attackers by surprise.

At any time, the attacking force can attack the fortress. The defenders have a +100 bonus to BF, but the attacking forcer takes half the casualties.

Additionally, each consecutie week of sieging, the defending force gets a cumulitive -5 to FR. If they run out of food or water, they begin accumulating -15.

Character Creation

Get a sheet of paper, or print out a character sheet, to record all of your character's details. Make sure to do so in pencil, as these details change over time. If your character sheet ever gets too messy, you can always copy the info to a fresh paper!

1. Profile

Note the player's name (i.e. your name) and the date this character is first played.

1. Ability Scores

Your character has six ability scores:

1. Strength (STR)
2. Dexterity (DEX)
3. Constitution (CON)
4. Intelligence (INT)
5. Wisdom (WIS)
6. Charisma (CHA)

To determine them, roll 3d6 seven times, and choose six of the resulting values to assign to your ability scores.

If you would rather not roll the dice, assign them from one of the following lists of values:

- 13, 13, 11, 11, 8, 8
- 16, 13, 10, 8, 6, 5

2. Class

Choose a class, and alignment for your character.

Write your current level (1) and max level given by your class. Then write your current EXP (0) and the EXP required to reach the next level.

2. Stats

Yabec has several stats associated with combat and exploration. Like your ability scores, most of them will improve as your character levels up.

1. Hit Points / Health Points (HP): Check your class's hit die. Give yourself HP equal to the max roll of that die.
2. Attack Value (AV): Give yourself your class's AV for level 1.
3. Armor Class (AC): Give yourself 11AC, the base AC for an unarmored human.
4. Saves: Note your physical (PHYS) and magical (MAGI) saving throws based on your class and level.
5. Class stats: If your class has any extra stats (like a Wizard's spell slots or a Mystic's mantra), note them here.
6. Hirelings: your Renown and Starting Loyalty (4 and 7 respectively). This will later be affected by your CHA, among other things. See Hirelings for more details.

1. Optional: A Note On Health

Yabec formally uses a damage up system, meaning instead of losing health, you gain damage. If you would like to play as intended, create a place where you can take note of how much damage you have accumulated.

That being said, your character sheet is your own, and as the person who will be looking at it the most, you may make a judgement call on how you want to keep track of health.

2. Optional: Prime Requisites

If your dungeon master gives prime requisite, note the bonus.

- If you have at least 13 points in one of your prime requisites, note that you get a 10% EXP boost.
- If you have at least 18 points in one of your prime requisites OR 13 points in two of your prime requisites, note that you have a 15% EXP boost.

3. Skills

3. Class Skills

Note the skills provided by your class.

4. Weapons And Armor

Note the types of armor and weapons you can use.

5. Languages

Note the languages you can speak.

6. Optional: Locked Skills

Optionally, note the skills you haven't unlocked yet but are planning to/are guaranteed to unlock in the coming levels.

4. Inventory

Give yourself a number inventory slots equal to your constitution score plus 10, and any starter items provided to you by your class.

5. Ability Score Bonuses

Factor in the bonuses or penalties to your stats from your ability scores.

It is recommended to write your boosts next to the base value of your stat to avoid applying them multiple times.

7. Strength

Attack: Bonus to AV.

Damage: Bonus to melee weapon damage.

Score	Attack	Damage
3	+3	-3
4-5	+2	-2
6-8	+1	-1
9-12	0	0
13-15	-1	+1
16-17	-2	+2
18	-3	+3

8. Dexterity

Armor: Bonus to AC.

Score	Armor
4-5	+2
6-8	+1
9-12	0
13-15	-1
16-17	-2
18	-3

9. Constitution

Health: Bonus HP. Apply each level.

Score	Health
3	-3*LVL
4-5	-2*LVL
6-8	-1*LVL
9-12	0
13-15	+1*LVL
16-17	+2*LVL
18	+3*LVL

10. Intelligence

Language: Number of langugages known, in addition to those from your class. See Languages for a list of languages, and consult with your party to see what languages would be helpful to learn.

Score	Language
3	speak only in mimicry
4-5	none
6-8	none
9-12	none
13-15	1
16-17	2

11. Wisdom

Bandage: Bonus healing when applying a bandage.

Score	Bandage
3	-3
4-5	-2
6-8	-1
9-12	0
13-15	+1
16-17	+2

12. Charisma

Reaction: Applies to monster reaction rolls.

Renown: Maximum number of hirelings.

Starting Loyalty: Starting loyalty of hirelings.

Score	Reaction	Renown	Loyalty
3	-2	-3	-3
4-5	-2	-2	-2
6-8	-1	-1	-1
9-12	0	0	0
13-15	+1	+1	+1
16-17	+2	+2	+2
18	+2	+3	+3

6. Equipmnt

There are two options.

- Manual: Roll 3d6, and multiply the result by 10. Write that you have a sack containing that many copper pieces (cp). Head over to the item list to buy gear. During character creation, you can buy any number of items at their book price. After that, you will need to track down an in-universe shop.
- Quick: To speed up character creation, roll once for armor, melee, and ranged, and twice for gear. If you don't like the result from a table, you may choose to take a lower item, or get 20 cp.

If this is the first session for a new party, choose one player, typically the caller or scribe. They get a horse, cart, 5 rations, 5 torches, 10 sacks, a wooden ladel, and an iron pot.

D12	Armor	Melee	Ranged	Gear
1	Leather	Staff	Sling	Rope
2	Leather	Dagger	Sling	5 torches
3	Leather	Dagger	Sling	5 Sacks
4	Leather	Club	3 Shivs	Chalk, Whistle, ball of twine, lodestone, bait
5	Leather	Spear	3 Shivs	Shovel, grappling hook, or iron tongs
6	Leather + Shield	Short Sword	Short Bow	Caltrops, grease, glue, or a flask of oil
7	Leather + Shield	Short Sword	8 Shivs	Bandaging kit, or antidote
8	Leather + Shield	Short Sword	8 Shivs	Chain, bolt cropper, or battering ram
9	Chain	Mace	10 Shivs	Two 10' Poles, Chalk, and a chisle
10	Chain + Shield	Battleaxe	Short Bow	2 Ropes, and Mallet + Spikes
11	Chain + Shield	Long Sword	Short Bow	Manacles, or magnefying lens
12	Plate	Polearm	Longbow	Mirror, hourglass, or padlock + key

13. Optional: Background

Roll a d100 to determine you background, and the trinkets that come with it. See trinkets

7. Complete!

Congratulations! You've created your character! Introduce them to the rest of your party.

Happy adventuring!

Alignment

The alignments are: Lawful, Neutral, or Chaotic. This impacts spellcasting and roleplay. Note that some classes have restrictions on which alignment they can be.

Beneath the surface of everyday life, two primeval forces mingle. Their servants see a cosmic harmony permieating the plane, or see only probibilities.

1. Magic

Magic affects creatures differently depending on alignment. Divine spellcastes need to be especially aware of their alignment; lawful casters may upset their diety by casting reversed spells, and vice versa. See LINKKKK for more details.

1. Alignment Language

Creatures automatically recognize a certain set of gestures, signs, and code words, pertaining to their alignment. This allows creatures of common alignment a measure of communication.

Creatures of a different alignment are likely to recognize an alignment language being spoken, but will not understand its content.

1. Revealing Alignment

Players must reveal their alignment to the dungeon master, but are not required to reveal to each other.

1. Role Playing Alignment

If the character acts too far out of their alignment, the referee may require them to change their alignment and suffer a penalty.

1. Changing Alignment

When changing alignment from Lawful or Chaotic, characters loose 10% of their xp.

Monstrous

Monstrous characters face additional challenges:

- They are not welcome in urban areas unless accompanied by a human, elf, or dwarf.
- They can not employ human hirelings.
- They do not automatically know the common language.
- They have a -2 to reaction rolls with non-monsters.
- When in sunlight, they have a +1 to AC, and AV.

Hirelings

Hirelings are NPCs that help the party. These include trained animals, humans which can be recruited to carry items and even fight in combat, and henchmen who level and grow like players. You may even be able to persuade monsters, or summon special creatures.

- Use a note card or additional sheet of paper to keep track of hirelings. You can use one card for each, or a large sheet with several.
- Each character can have a maximum number of hirelings equal to their Renown.
- Hirelings must have fewer hit dice than their boss.
- Hirelings must have their upkeep paid at the start of each session and each 7 days. Monsters with 10 or more loyalty do not need to be paid upkeep.
- The boss must provide for any new adventuring gear, weapons, or mounts.
- Hirelings can carry everything mentioned in their description plus one additional slot.

1. Loyalty

Hirelings are not mindless slaves. If abused, hirelings might desert, mutiny, betray, or slander their boss.

The starting loyalty score of a hireling is your character's loyalty, and each monster starts with 4 loyalty.

Hirelings with two or less loyalty will betray boss, and have a 4-in-6 chance of reducing their renown by one. Monstrous, and chaotic hirelings may only cooperate temporarily, betraying their boss once the conditions are right.

1. Loyalty Check

Roll 2d6. The check succeeds if the result is equal to or less than the loyalty score.

2. Peril

Dangerous tasks are perilous. A hireling must succeed a loyalty check or refuse the task. Furthermore, if they take damage or come to any unexpected harm during the task, they lose one loyalty.

Example of peril include:

- fighting a risky and unnesscary battle
- becoming lost in the dungeon
- acting as bait
- probing unknown objects

3. Stats

The dungeon master has stats for animals and monsters.

Hirelings have 19AV, 9AC, and 5HP with saves 8PHYS and 5MAGI.

1. Henchmen

Henchmen are sidekicks which can gain EXP and level up like players. There are two ways to gain them:

1. If a hireling survives three sessions, they can become a level 0 henchman.
2. A NPC can be persuaded to become a player's heanchmen through roleplay. The dungeon master will decide what level they start at.

- Henchmen have 10 inventory slots.
- Henchmen have a d8 hit die, and calculate HP like players.
- Henchmen go near-death and dismember like players.
- When a boss gains EXP, each of their henchman also get that EXP.

- Instead of upkeep, henchmen are paid with a portion of their boss's treasure. That portion is equal to two divided by their loyalty.
- At 2nd level, they gain one ability. If their boss is a spellcaster, they can memorize one 1st level spell from their boss. Otherwise, they choose one fighter skill.
- At 4th level, they gain a second ability. If their boss is a spellcaster, they can memorize one 2nd level spell from their boss. Otherwise they choose one advanced fighter skill.
- You can only have one henchman.

Requirements: CHA 9
Health die: d4
Armour: Leather
Weapons: Thrown, Club, Short Sword, Polearm, Staff
Languages: Alignment, Common, Carnie.
Prime requisite: DEX
Maximum level: 14
Examples:

Acrobats are performers, skilled in balance, and gymnastics. They're often traveling workers, taking up adventuring, or even burglary.

1. Acrobat Skills

Choose two acrobat skills. Each time you level up, choose another. The odds of the skill succeeding is shown on the skill progression table.

- Breath Fire: While holding a lit torch and a flask of oil, you can create a burst of flame. This consumes the flask. It affects all creatures in front of you within a touch range, and deals 1d6 exploding damage. When it explodes there is a mishap, and you are also affected. Any affected creatures can attempt a physical saving throw to avoid half of the damage.
- Climb Sheer Surfaces: A roll is required for each 100' to be climbed. If the roll fails, the acrobat falls at the halfway point, suffering fall damage. (1d6 per 10')
- Falling: When able to tumble, suffer no damage from the first 10' of any fall. Further damage is reduced by the listed percentage.
- Catch Missiles: Once per turn, attempt to can catch a non-magical projectile.
- Tightrope Walking: Acrobats can walk tightropes, narrow beams, and ledges. Failure indicates that the acrobat falls. A balance pole increases the chance by 10%.
- Evasion: When you succeed a saving throw, take no damage instead of half. Take half damage instead of full on a failed save.
- Nimble: During combat, attack and move in one action.
- Running Vault: With a 20' run-up and a pole, jump this long, and half as high.
- Quick Movement: During combat, move two zones. Use a limited number of times per turn.

- Keen Hearing (9 WIS, 1): +1 to all eavesdropping checks.
- Keen Smell (9 CON, 3): If a Kobold, +1 to door checks. You're able to locate creatures via scent.
- Large Natural Weapon (9 STR, 4): Your body itself is a powerful weapon. You may attack with a d12, melee, slow weapon at any point.
- Leap (9 DEX, 4): Can jump 15' in one bound, and 10' vertically. If used immediately before making a melee attack, -2 AV.
- Monstrous (3): HD becomes a d12. Become monstrous.
- Nature's Favor (9 CHA, 5): +1 healing from druids.

- Nine Lives (7): Nine times, choose to roll a base score of 30 on dismemberment.
- Pack Animal (1): +2 item slots.
- Pack Hunter (9 CHA, 2): Once per turn, when an ally hits an enemy, your next attack against that enemy has advantage.
- Small Natural Weapon (9 DEX, 2): Your body itself is a powerful weapon. You may attack with a d6, melee weapon at any point.
- Hiding (9 DEX, 3): In woods or undergrowth, 90% chance of success. In dungeons, 2-in-6 chance of success. There must be some form of cover and must remain motionless and silent.
- Speak With Animals (9 CHA, 3): Choose one type of animal. You may speak with that animal as though by a Speak With Animals spell.
- Climb Sheer Surfaces (5): Climb sheer surfaces. Make a DEX check ever 100', and whenever you take damage.
- Tough (9 CON, 2): Dismember with advantage.

1. Languages

Bards learn a new spoken languages at every odd level (i.e. 1st, 3rd, etc.).

They can't learn special languages (such as Druidic).

2. Song

At first level, a bard knows one song. Each odd level after that, they learn an additional song.

- Chant du coq: Enrages and attracts monsters; ends sleep.
- Chant de guerre: Allies that can hear have +1 on loyalty checks and spell saves.
- J'aime les animaux: Same effects as Animal Friendship.
- Impressionner les fées: Impress Fae. 4-in-6 if Fae has less HD than Bard's level, 2-in-6 if greater.
- La calomnier: Allies within a short distance make saves against charms with a +4 bonus. Those already charmed make an additional save.
- Musique de combat: Same effects as Bless. At 4th level, may have the same effects as Cause Fear instead.
- Flirter avec les dragonnes: Same effects as Lesser Charm. At 8th level, same effects as Greater Charm instead.

1. Restrictions

- Each song can be used at most once per session.
- Songs are magic and follow the same rules as spell casting.
- Must be concentrating and playing a musical instrument.
- Creates loud noise.
- All effects end after 1 turn.

3. Flag Bearer

Starting at 3rd level, while you carry a banner, players have +1 on initiative roles.

Cleric

a cleric

Requirements: None
Health die: d6
Armour: All
Weapons: See tenets
Languages: Alignment, Common, Ceremonial
Prime requisite: WIS
Maximum level: 14
Examples: Bishop Otto, Joan of Arc, Tripitaka

Clerics are adventurers who have sworn to serve a deity. They are trained for battle and channel the power of their deity. Their holy doctrine forbids the use of sharp weapons.

12	500k	14	17	11
13	600k	12	17	13
14	700k	12	17	13

2. Holy Symbol

In addition to other equipment, you start with a holy symbol.

3. Turn Undead

Clerics can invoke the power of their deity to repel undead monsters. To turn the undead, present your holy symbol (using one hand) and roll 2d6. The Dungeon Master can either tell you the HD of the monster, or consult the table themselves.

If the result is equal to or greater than the number in the table, the monster is turned. At higher levels, some undead may be automatically turned or destroyed.

1. Restrictions

Excess: Rolled Hit Dice that are not sufficient to affect a monster are wasted.

Minimum effect: At least one undead monster will always be affected on a successful turning.

Mixed groups: If the undead are of different types, those with the lowest HD are affected first.

Recharge: A cleric can attempt to turn only once per dungeon turn.

2. Turning Table

T: Turned
D: Destroyed

3. Successful Turning

If the turning attempt succeeds, roll 2d6 again to determine the number of undead affected.

Turned undead will leave the area, if possible, and will not harm or make contact with the Cleric.

4. Divine Magic

See Magic for full details.

Holy Symbol: A cleric must carry a holy symbol to use magic.

Deity disfavor: Clerics must be faithful to the tenets of their alignment, clergy, and religion. Choose five tenets:

1. Sober: Refuse to buy, sell, or use poisons, including alcohol
2. Reverent: Respect of all royalty, and follow all rules of etiquette.
3. Spared: Only use blunt weapons.
4. Solitude: Refuse hirelings.
5. Druid: Refuse to use metal weapons and armor.
6. Hear No Evil: Refusal to be enchanted. Using magic items potentially incurs disfavor.
7. Tithe: 5% tithe to the temple.
8. Modest Tithe: 10% tithe to the temple.

Spell casting: Once a cleric has proven their faith (from 2nd level), the character may pray to receive spells. The power and number of spells available to a cleric are determined by the character's level. Their spell list is found at the bottom of this section.

5. After Reaching 9th Level

A cleric may establish or build a stronghold. So long as the cleric is currently in favor with their god, a stronghold may be bought or built at half the normal price, due to the aid of the faithful.

Once a stronghold is established, the cleric will attract followers (5d6 × 10 fighters of level 1-2). These troops are completely devoted to the cleric, having a loyalty of 12. The referee decides which proportions of followers are 1st and 2nd level and which are bowmen, infantry, etc.

Druid

placeholder image

Requirements: Neutral Alignment
Health die: d4
Armour: Leather, Hide, Shields
Weapons: Non-metal weapons (no crossbows, swords, maces, etc)
Languages: Alignment, Common, Druidic, Sylvan
Prime requisite: WIS
Maximum level: 10
Examples: Ergo of Crull

Druids are priests of nature, protecting wild lands from the encroachment of Law and the corrupting touch of Chaos. They worship the force of nature itself. Their holy doctrine forbids the use of metal.

1. Progression

9	90k	14	14	11
10	125k	14	14	11

2. Limited Possessions

A druid may only keep wealth and possessions that can be kept on their person or mount. Excess must be donated to worthy causes.

3. Divine Magic

See Magic for full details.

Holy symbol: A druid must carry an animal bone in order to cast spells.

Deity disfavor: Druids must be faithful to the tenets of their alignment and religion. Tenets of the druid include:

- Refusal of metal tools.
- Sanctity of nature.
- Sanctity of the hunt.
- Respect of the dead.

Spell casting: A druid may pray to receive spells. The power and number of spells available to a cleric are determined by the character's level. Their spell list is found at the end of this section.

4. Identification

Druids can identify plants, animals and clean water.

5. Shape Change

At 2nd level, a druid gains the ability to change into animals.

1. Shapes Known

A druid can know as many shapes as their level. Learning a knew shape requires three observations, which must be on unique individuals, and on separate days.

2. Observation

Observation takes one turn and requires the druid to be unnoticed.

3. Transforming

- Can only be used once per day.
- Lasts a number of turns equal to the druid's level.
- Follows the same rules as spell casting.
- Must be holding the bone or hide of the animal.
- The animal must have hit dice equal to or less than the druid's level.
- Must be a non-magical animal.
- If a druid has lost hit points, they regain 1d4 hit points per level upon changing into an animal.
- All equipment carried by the druid is absorbed into the animal form and reappears when the druid changes back.

6. Pass Without Trace

From 3rd level, a druid can pass through natural environments without leaving any tracks. A druid is also able to move through overgrown areas at normal speed and without impediment

7. Charm Immunity

Druids of 7th level and above are immune to charms.

8. Reaching 12th Level And Above

There can only be nine druids of 12th level. When a druid has enough experience to reach 12th level, they must challenge an existing 12th level druid. The character only advances to 12th level if the other druid is defeated. Such challenges may take any form that is agreed by both parties, including combat (which need not be fatal). Likewise, there can only be three druids of 13th level and a single druid (known as the arch-druid) of 14th level.

Druids who attain 12th level or above may have a bhold magically integrated into a natural setting.

2d12 beings will join the ranger as followers. The nature of these followers is up to the referee.

Requirements: CON 9
Health die: d8
Armour: All
Weapons: All
Languages: Alignment, Common, Dwarvish
Prime requisite: STR
Maximum level: 12
Examples: Thorin Oakenshield, Hoggle of the Labyrinth

Dwarves are stout, bearded demihumans, about 4' tall and weighing about 150 pounds. They live underground and love fine craftsmanship, gold, hearty food, and drink. Dwarves are known for their stubbornness and practicality.

1. Progression

Lv	XP	AV	Phys	Magic
1	0	19	9	5
2	2.2k	19	9	5
3	4.4k	19	9	5

2. Detect Construction

When searching, dwarves also detect flaws in construction, sliding walls, sloping passages and other stone architectural features.

3. Patch-Up

Once per session, prevent a fragile weapon from degrading.

4. Infravision

Dwarves can see in the dark.

5. Anchint Rivalry

Elves hate dwarves. Dwarves can not have elvish hirelings, and have disadvantage on any social checks made with elves.

6. Tough

Dwarves dismember with a advantage.

7. Berserker

While a dwarf has damage equal to or greater than 50% of their health, their AV is reduced by 4.

8. Speak With Stones

At 7th level, a dwarf can cast Speak With Stones once per session.

SPEAK WITH STONES

The caster gains the ability to speak with stones, including animated statues and earth elementals. This doesn't make the plants any more friendly or cooperative than normal.
Lasts until fatigued.

9. After Reaching 9th Level

A dwarf has the option of creating an underground stronghold that will attract dwarves from far and wide. Dwarves usually live in clans, so dwarves of the character's clan will be attracted to live under their roof. Dwarves from other clans will generally be friendly and clans may collaborate in times of war or disaster.

A dwarf ruler may only hire dwarven mercenaries. However specialists and hirelings of any race may be hired.

14	920k	10	16	16

1. Chivalric Code

Knights are bound by a code of honor. Breaking code revokes knighthood; they become a Fighter.

- Knighted: Service of the knight's liege.
- Sword and Shield: Defense of all in their charge
- Forked Branch: Sanctity of single combat.
- Guts: Death over dishonor.

2. Knight Skills

- Knights gain a -2 bonus to AV when mounted.
- Knights gain a -2 bonus to AV when in single combat. They heal 1d6 when begining single combat.
- Once per turn, a knight can take the damage of an attack directed at an touch ally. Reduce the damage by half.
- When a knight is healed by your liege, they gain -2 AV until fatigued. (apply only once)
- When a Knight allows an opponet to retreat or surrender, they heal 1.

3. Hospitality

A knight of 3rd level or higher can expect hospitality and aid from nobles and other knights of the same alignment or social affiliation. A knight is expected to extend such hospitality in kind.

4. Strength Of Will

Knights are immune to fear effects. From 3rd level, companions within a short distance of the knight gain advantage on saving throws against fear effects, and loyalty checks.

5. Honor

Starting at 3rd level, a knight can acrue honor points. A knight gains one honor point the first time each turn they use one of their knight skills. They can have a maximum honor equal to their level.

6. Virtue

When a knight completes certain deeds, they can gain a special ability called a virtue. They can use their virtue by spending honor points. They can only activate one virtue per turn.

Virtue	Ability	Deed
Worthy of my Blade	While in single combat, spend X honor to increase a magical enhancement on a weapon by +X, to a maximum of +4, until the end of the turn.	Defeat a worthy opponet, with more HD than you, in single combat, with a magic weapon.
Respect for the Dead	Once per day, you can spend an honor to cast speak with dead.	Contribute at least 5000 cp to a funeral
Even in Death	Once per month, when you would become near death, you can spend four honor to prevent it.	Be brought back from the dead
Damsel in Distress	When carrying one a person / body, you can spend an honor. If you do, they and their possessions don't count towards your encumberance for that turn.	Rescue someone from a firebreathing monster
Fang of the Dragon	While holding a magic weapon, speak its name and spend one honor to cause it to emit bright flash of light. This light is sunlight, turns undead as though a 3rd level cleric, and grants +2 on reaction rolls with creatures with the same alighnment as the weapon.	Remove a magic weapon from stone
Yes, my Lord!	When you fail a saving throw, attack roll, or skill check, without disadvantage, and in service of a charge spell, spend one honor to reattempt.	Have a charge spell cast on you

Never abandon the Quest	Consult with the dungeon master for a custom power.	Rescue a holy relic
Mastery	When a non-magical ranged attack is made against you, spend one honor to automatically dodge it. You have advantage on attacks against the attacker for one turn.	Succeed six consecutive dodges in one turn
Treachery	When you make an attack against a surprised target, spend one honor to deal double damage.	When allies are in mortal danger, make a lethal attack against the foe while they are prone.
Pure of Heart	When you succeed a saving throw to resist a charm, spend one honor to reverse the effects onto the caster.	Resist ten charms cast by foes
Serve as my Champion	When a creature refuses single combat with you, and refuses to appoint a champion in their place, you may spend two honor point. If you do, they must succeed a magic saving throw or become magically frightened, having disadvantage on all attacks and saves until fatigued.	Win single combat while serving as champion for an NPC.
You've Studied Wudan	Spend 4 honor to cast dispel magic.	While in single combat with a worthy opponet, correctly calculate you chance to hit.

7. Caming

A knight of 5th level or higher can train magical animals using downtime.

1. Block: Costs 1 mantra. You gain a -1 bonus to AC for each free hand you have. Last until fatigued.
2. Break Repoise: Costs 2 mantra. When you hit an enemy, the target must also make a physical save or lose all actions this round.
3. Breath Fire: While holding a lit torch and a flask of oil, you can create a burst of flame. This consumes the flask. It affects all creatures in front of you within a touch range, and deals 1d6 exploding damage. When it explodes there is a mishap, and you are also affected. Any affected creatures can attempt a physical saving throw to avoid half of the damage.
4. Darkvision: Costs 1 mantra. Gain infravision for one turn.
5. Divination: Costs 3 mantra. You cast Portent. Once per sesssion, instead cast Augury.

PORTANT

Ask the dungeon master about a specific course of action. The dungeon master describes the likely results of the action as either "wheel" or "woe".

AUGURY

The cast divines a small amount of knowlage. The caster names or describe a person, place, or object. Three statments come to their mind, 1-2 of which are true.

If cast on a magic item with a command word, and the caster fails to speak the command word, augury instead reveals a number of random letters from the command word equal to the caster's level.

6. Fein: Costs 3 mantra. For one turn you appear completely dead. Ends if you move voluntarially.
7. Feline: Costs 3 mantra. You can fit through a gap as small as your head, have advantage on saves to resist fall damage, and have an AC of 7. Lasts until fatigued.
8. Janitor: Costs 1 mantra. Open a door silently. This turn and next, you can not be surprised.
9. Kung Fu: Costs 2 mantra. When you hit with a blunt weapon, you can make an unarmed attack.
10. Parry: Costs 2 mantra. Change a hit against you to a miss. Additionally, you can make a melee attack against the attacker.
11. Pressure Point: Costs 2 mantra. When you hit, cause the target to be surprised and proned.
12. Psychic Blast: Costs 10 mantra. All other creatures within the same zone as you take a d8 of damage per your level. You pass out and are incapacitated for the rest of the combat.
13. Realign: Costs 5 mantra. Cast Lesser Charm. The spell fails if the target is of the same alignment as you.

LESSER CHARM

A person is charmed, as follows:

- Friendship: The subject regards the caster as its trusted friend and ally.
- Commands: The caster may give the charmed creature commands, which it will obey, if it understands, if it is not obviously self destructive, and if it does not conflict with their alignment or religion.

Restrictions: Undead, and creatures of 4 HD and greater are not affected.

Duration: The charm lasts indefinetly, or until the caster or an ally attacks the subject. Additionally, the subject makes new magic saves at intervals depending on it's intelligence:

- ≤8: New save each month.
- 9-12: New save each week.
- 13-17: New save each day.
- 18: New save each hour.

14. Relocate: Costs 7 mantra. Walk or climb to an adjacent zone. To observers, this appears instant. Additionally you ignore mundane restrictions to movement such as mud or manicals.
15. Share Lung: Costs 4 mantra. Cast Cure Wounds. If the target is not the same alignment as you, heal with disadvantage. Use this no more than three times per session.

CURE WOUNDS

A touched creature heals 1d6+1.

16. Tough: Costs 3 mantra. Gain advantage on dismembering.

17. Telepathy: Costs 4 mantra. Hear the thoughts of one creature you can see, unless it succeeds a magic save. Lasts one turn. At 5th level and higher, once per session instead cast Telepathy, and can send thoughts to the concentrated creature.

TELEPATHY

Grants the caster the ability to perceive and understand the thoughts of other creatures. When the spell begins, the caster is assaulted by the thoughts of all creatures distant or closer. They are incomprehensible, but reveal the location of the creature.

By fully concentrating on single creature, the caster can perceive and understand that creatures thoughts.

The thoughts of magical creatures may be dangerous. Lasts one turn per level

Obstructions: The ability to perceive thoughts is obstructed by a thin layer of lead or by rock of 2' thick or greater.

18. Third Eye: Costs 4 mantra. Cast Detect Magic. Limit once per session.

DETECT MAGIC

Enchanted objects, areas, and creatures glow while in the same zone as the caster. If they spend one turn studying a magic object, they learn general details about one of it's affects.

Lasts until fatigued.

19. Third Eye: Costs 1 mantra. Gain the ability to use any normal weapon. Lasts until fatigued.
20. Void: Costs 4 mantra. Cure a mundane illneess or neutralize a mundane poison from yourself. Alternitively, transfer a mundane or magical poison or illness, or a curse to yourself.

5. After Reaching 9th Level

A mystic may establish or build a monastery.

Once a monastery is established, the mystic will attract followers (2d6 mystics of level 1-3, and 2d10 fighters of level 1-2).

2. Thieves' Tools

In addition to other equipment, you start with thieve's tools.

3. Thieves' Cant

Thieves know a general code of conduct, including unique gestures, signs, and code words. This language allows them to communicate on nefarious matters while sounding like innocent small talk to the unfamiliar.

4. Thief Skills

Thieves are highly talented, and capable of many skills. See the skill progression table.

- Climb sheer surfaces: A roll is required for each 100' to be climbed. If the roll fails, the thief falls at the halfway point, suffering fall damage. (1d6 per 10')
- Check Doors: A thief gets a bonus to eavesdropping.
- Open Locks: Requires Thieves' Tools. A thief can only try this skill once per lock. If the roll fails, the thief may not try the same lock again before gaining an experience level.
- Uncanny Stealth: A thief can attempt to hide motionless in shadows, or sneak past enemies unnoticed.

- Pickpocket: If the victim is above 5th level, the thief's roll is penalised by 5% for every level above 5th. There is always at least a 1% chance of failure. A roll of more than twice the percentage is required for the theft to be unnoticed.

Checking skills with a percent chance: roll a d100. If it is the listed value or less, the skill succeeds.

Structures

Players with large amounts of money and power will begin building or buying larger structures.

1. Jump To Section

1. Construction
2. Siege Weapons
3. Water Vessels
4. Water Vessels
5. Having a Stronghold

2. Construction

1. Permission

Players need permission from local rulers to undertake construction. For siege weapons and water vessels, this may be a simple request of fee for a permit. For buildings, this may involve the complex process of acquiring land rights.

When constructing in the wilderness, players instead face logistical challenges.

2. Clear Land

If building in the wilderness, all monsters in a 6 mile area must be killed or driven off.

3. Design

The player creates a plan for what they would like to build, and calculates the construction cost. Then seeks approval from the dungeon master.

4. Costs And Time

Construction requires 1 day per 5000 cp, and one engineer per 1,000,000 cp (whose upkeep must be paid each week), and .

Hiring dwarves quarters the construction time, but requires the approval of a dwarven chieftain, and increases the cost 10 fold.

Repairing a heavily damaged construction costs half as much and takes a tenth as long. Repairing a lightly damaged construction costs a quarter as much and takes a twentieth as long

3. Siege Weapons

Each siege weapon requires eight people or two horses to move. Additionally, they can't be effectively aimed at individuals, except for very large monsters.

Siege Ammo ---------- 10

heavy

Flaming Siege Ammo ---------- 20

heavy. Requires an additional crew member to light the ammo with a torch. Lights buildings on fire.

Ballista ---------- 2000

A very large cross bow. Requires three people to operate, and fires once each round, has a AV of 17, and deals 3d8 damage.

Boiling Oil ---------- 1000

A large iron pot, with a furnace below it. It can be filled with flaming siege ammo, and then dumped. Can only fire every other turn, deals 3d8, save physical for half.

Trebuchet ---------- 4000

Uses a counterweight to fling massive stones. Requires three people to operate, and fires once every other round, has a AV of 19, and deals 5d12.

Screw ---------- 2000

Used to bore through walls. Requires eight people to operate, and fires once each round, has a AV of 15, and deals 4d8.

Sow ---------- 1000

Portable roof used to deflect ranged attacks. Has an AC of 5 and 50 HP.

4. Water Vessels

Pre-built vessels may be available for twice their construction cost. A passenger occupies 20 slots, a siege weapon 50 slots.

Vessel	Cost	Crew	Cargo	Usage	Length	Beam	Drai
Dingie	1,000	1	60	river, coast	10'	5'	1'
Fishing Boat	4,000	4	300	river, coast	20'	10'	3'
Riverboat	20,000	10	800	river, coast	70'	15'	3'
Galley	30,000	30	1000	Coast, sea	100'	20'	6'
Longship	50,000	100	5000	Coast, sea	200'	30'	15'

5. Buildings

1. Demolishion

Remove a small building costs 5,000 cp. Large buildings take multiples of that. Clearing rubble takes 1 day per 1,000 cp.

2. Complete Buildings

One room building ---- 15,000
10'x10'x10'. Wood walls, stone floor, thatch roof. Costs 50% in towns.

Three room building ---- 30,000 first floor: 20'x20'x10'. Second floor: 25'x25'x10'. Cellar: 15'x15'. Wood walls, stone floor, thatch roof. Costs 50% less in towns.

Keep ---- 750,000
60' square, 80' high, walls 10' thick. Stone walls, dirt ground floor, two wooden floors, thatched roof.

Well ---- 1,000
5'x5'x100'. Provides water.

3. Defences

Drawbridge ---- 25,000
Raisable wooden bridge. 10' long..

Gatehouse ---- 100,000
Fortified entry point in wall, with portcullis. 30'x30'x20'.

Moat ---- 50,000
Ditch filled with water. 100' long, 20' wide, 10' deep. Each additional 10' of width, and depth (max 30') costs 50,000 cp.

4. Roof

Thatch ---- 500
10' sq.

Tile ---- 1000
Clay tiles. 10'.

Stone ---- 2000
10'. Requires buttressing every 20' feet. Buttressing extends 1' beyond the roof for every 10' of width.

Buttressing ---- 5000
40' tall, 10' wide. Additional 5000 cp per 10' of height (max 60') and 10' of width (max 60').

5. Towers

Either freestanding, or built into a wall. Towers can be no taller than thrice their diameter. Each additional 10' of hight costs 10,000 times the diameter.

Small ---- 300,000
40' diameter, 60' high, wall 5' thick.

6. Walls

Each additional 10' of height, to a max of 60', costs 50,000 cp more.

Castle ---- 50,000
Stone wall with battlements, 100' long, 20' high, 10' thick.

Stone ---- 10,000
Plain stone wall, 100' long, 10' high, 1' thick.

Wood ---- 5000
Plain wood wall, 100' long, 10' high, 1' thick.

7. Interior

Door or trapdoor, wood ---- 500

Door or trapdoor, stone ---- 1,000

Door or trapdoor, iron ---- 5,000

Door or trapdoor, hidden ---- 5x normal

Floor, wood ---- 100
10'x10'

Floor, Stone ---- 500
10'x10'. Requires buttressing every 20' if above ground.

Lock ---- 100

Shifting wall ---- 5,000
10'x10'.

Stairs ---- 5,000
10'.

Subterranean passage ---- 5,000
10'x10'x10'. Dwarven minors will dig subterranean pasages for 500 per 10x10x10 section.

6. Having A Stronghold

1. Costs Of Ownership

Maintaining the physical buildings and infrastructure costs 1-5% of the total price of the stronghold per year. This accounts for normal wear and tear, damage due to weathering or misfortune or the like. Failing to pay for this causes the stronghold to fall into disrepair and eventually into ruin.

Any servants, mercenaries, specialists and the like must be paid their agreed rates on a weekly. If the servants, specialists or mercenaries require special facilities, materials or the like, these must be provided regularly and in good repair

Livestock, horses and the like must be properly sheltered, fed and watered.

2. Income From Strongholds

Strongholds do not typically have a source of income. Stronghold owners that attempt such tolls without a clear mandate from some remote ruler (and even if such a mandate exists) are seen as little more than extortionists and "bandit lords", forcing fees upon travelers on threat of punishment by the Stronghold's owner. However, this does not deter some owners from "collecting their fair share for bringing peace to an area"

Downtime

Downtime is an optional system to roleplay the character's actions between adventures, and provides benefits to players.

Each adventurer sitting at the DM's table gets one downtime before the session starts. That downtime can be used for any returning character.

- Advanced Downtime
- Baking
- Enhancing Equipment
- Community Service
- Healing
- Gambling
- Mentoring
- Selling
- Taming
- Team-Building
- Questing
- Research
- Worshiping

1. Advanced Downtime

Second level characters of certain classes can instead perform advanced downtime.

2. Baking

Help at the local bakery. Prevent the first 2 damage that would be dealt to you this session.

The baker also is a local gossip. If the baker does not already have one, make an NPC card for them. Each time you bake, they will provide you with one rumor. If you provide a rumor in return, gain 10 xp.

3. Enhancing Equipment

Lose any amount of XP up to the sum of all six ability scores, and pay that many cp. Add that much XP to an item. When that item has 333 XP, it becomes a +1 enhanced item. When it has 3,333, it becomes a +2 item. When it has 33,333 xp, it has a 3-in-6 chance to become +3, or to explode.

4. Community Service

Performing service at the temple has no direct benefit, but may be required as penalty for crimes.

Except for the first time, chaotic characters can hire a goon to do the service for them, first costing 100 cp, then costing 1% more, compounding.

Deity disfavor will not be forgiven if you hire a goon.

5. Healing

A stay in the temple of your alignment costs 100cp, or one downtime worth of service. It cures mundane illnesses, has a 5-in-6 chance of curing mundane toxins, and has a 2-in-6 chance of removing curses.

6. Gambling

Play a number of games of Dragon Ante equal to up to thrice your level.

You might also hear rumors. Make two CHA checks. For each you succeed, ask the Dungeon Master for a rumor.

Dragon Ante

The buy in for each game is 50cp. Roll a 2d10 and see the result.

If you are a thief, add your level to the roll. If you roll two ones, you still go to jail, and the fine is doubled.

2d10	Result
<=2	Jail! Lose your buy in and perform a downtime of service.
3-4	Bad pokerface: gain 25cp.
5-12	Break even: gain 50cp.
13	Gain 55cp.
14	Win the opportunity to play twice more!
15-16	Win 60cp
17	Win 75cp, anger a local
18	Win 100cp, get in a bar fight: 1d6 damage
19	Hot Hand! Win 100 cp. Get asked to leave for the downtime.
>=20	Challenge the red dragon!

1. Challenging The Red Dragon

Roll a d12. On a 1, lose your buy in. On a 2-11, you win 55 cp. On a 12, win 350 cp, or...

Choose to challenge Tiamat: Roll 6d6. Choose any number to reroll.

Repeat this three more times. If you have six of a kind, or a 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6, you win 666cp.

2. Wild Wyvern

Once you win (or lose) 101 cp or more in a single downtime, you are invited to a Wild Wyvern table: an exclusive game for the best players. It is the same as Dragon Ante, with the following modifications:

- Buy in, as well as the pay outs, and penalties are increased by a factor of 100.
- instead of 2d10, use 4d6-1d12.
- Whenever you roll two or more of a kind (except for five fives and four fours), you enter double dragon: wager an additional 500cp, reduce the number of games you'll play by the number of a kind. Then add that many d4s to your roll.
- When you roll five fives, you will 55555cp. When you roll four fours, you loose 4444cp.

7. Mentoring

1. Finding A Mentor

Training, employment, and some magical research requires a mentor. The target number is equal to:

- 50
- plus your charisma score
- minus 10 times the level of the mentor you seek
- plus however many additional sp you spend looking

Roll a d100. If it is less than or equal to the target number, you found a mentor!

Make an NPC card for them, and add their level.

2. Employment

You can work form them. You can only work for a mentor of a higher level than you.

Your mentor pays you a number of cp equal to:

- your level
- times their level
- times 20
- times your bonus (starts at 1)

After, make a CHA check. If you succeed, multiply your bonus by 1.2.

3. Training

You can only train under a mentor of the same class and a higher level than you. traing costs 10 cp, times the level of your mentor.

Spend upto 100 times your Lv in cp. Gain that much experience. If you spend 20% more, your henchmen also gain half that much experience.

8. Selling

Try to get a better buy on your treasure.

Each downtime, you can find buyers for treasure equal to 500 cp times your level. If a single object is more valuable than that, you must work for several downtimes to sell it; other players may assist by using their downtime as well.

When you sell the item, roll a d100 on the table, and add your charisma score.

d100	Sale
<20	Robbed! 0%
20-29	Low ball: 75%
30-39	Low ball: 90%
40-89	110%
90-100	140%
>100	Swindler! 200%

If you get a low ball, you can refuse to sell, and try again next downtime.

If you get robbed, ask your Dungeon Master for a lead on the thieves.

9. Taming

Mundane animals can be tamed by anyone. Druids, and Elves, can tame magical animals, and tame mundane animals twice as fast.

Each downtime, make two CHA, and two WIS checks. (Druids and Elves make four of each). Once you gain a number of successes equal to 4 plus the HD of the animal, they becomes tamed. Then you can begin training it.

Each of the following skills costs a certain amount of successes. Once trained, the animal will automatically succeed at tasks related to the skill.

Skill	Successes
Bravery	2
Attacking	5
Rideable	1
Guarding	3
Tracking	3
Fetching	4
Rudimentary Language Skills	15

10. Team-Building

Costs 50 cp per hireling. Each participating hireling has a 2-in-6 chance of gaining 1 loyalty, to a maximum of 8.

11. Questing

More adventuring!

Choose a challenge to face. Each round, you'll make a melee attack against it, and then it will make a melee attack against you. You can flee at anytime.

Multiple characters can team up. Each character gets to make an attack, and the challenge will make only one attack, choosing a target at random.

If you slay the challenge, you gain its reward.

Fighters and Knights take half damage.

1. Sewers

HP: 1d8, AC: 9 AV: 19, DMG: 1
Reward: 4d6 cp + 10 xp + a rumor.

2. Outlands

HP: 3d8, AC: 8 AV: 17, DMG: 1d4
Reward: 6d6 sp + 100 xp + a rumor.

3. Swamp

HP: 9d8, AC: 5 AV: 14, DMG: 2d6+2
Reward: 12d6 sp + 1000 xp

4. Den Of A Lesser Dragon

HP: 10d8, AC: 0 AV: 8, DMG: All save Blast for 8d6 (recharge 5-6), or 2d6 Reward: 2000 gp + 5000 xp + remove a deity disfavor.

12. Research

Use your downtime to learn! Not to be confused with magical downtime

Choose an object to study, such as a log book, artifact, or monster corpse. Make a number of intellegence checks equal to your level. You gain research points equal to the number of successes. Each time you research, you can spend points to learn from the subject.

Special historical objects called relics come with research points. The first time they're researched, automatically gain that many research points.

- One point: a piece of background info.
- Two points: a specific or unique fact.
- Three points: ask a question and get a yes/no/maybe answer.
- Five points: ask a question and get an answer 20 words or less.
- Twenty points: work with the dungeon master to invent a fact.

13. Worship

In order to worship, you must visit a temple matching your alignment. Each time you worship, you gain merit equal to you wisdom score plus 1d20. When you die, the temple will contribute cp to your funeral equal to your merit. There is also a chance they will be able to revive you, equal to merit/2000

Additionally, divine spell-casters might be able to forgive deity disfavor. The chance is equal to LVL+WIS/100

Lastly, there is a 1-in-12 chance that your prayers will return a rumor.

NPC

Write each of the following details on an index card, and give it to your Dungeon Master.

- Name, and a title if desired.
- Picture. Can be anything, portrait, symbol, etc.
- A manorism or visible detail.
- A connection to your character.
- A connection to any other character.
- A secret.

Advanced Downtime

These downtime activies are only available to certain classes, and only to characters 2nd level and higher.

1. Crime

Only Thieves, Acrobats, Animalkin, Kobold and Warlocks can pursue crime.

Thieves have advantage on ability checks made for crime.

1. Heist

A heist is a single large crime or scheme. Get a note card to keep track of your progress on the heist.

2. Filling A Vacancy

Scoping out a new heist takes one downtime.

1. Write the location and the target on your heist card.
2. Roll a number of d12 equal to your level. This is the value of the heist in sp.
3. Roll a d6. This is the potential of the heist.
4. Roll 2d4. This is the heat of the heist.
5. Write each ability score.

Up The Ante

If you're up for a challenge, the heat of the heist becomes 10, and the value increases tenfold.

3. Getting Paid

Whenever you get paid for crime, you also score that much XP, divided amung all players participating in the heist.

4. Risk

Whenever you take a risk, cross off an ability score from your heist card. If none remain, take your pick instead. Check that ability. If you fail, there is an X-in-8 chance of trouble, where X is the the heat of the heist.

After the first trouble, the heist loses two potential and gains one heat. Additionally, you must pay a fine equal to twice the value of the heist, and perform a downtime of service.

After the second trouble, you end the heist, pay a fine of four times the value, and must perform two downtimes of service.

Losing a Glove

If you are unable to pay the fine, you instead have a hand cut off. If you have already lost both hands, you are executed instead.

5. Actions

Each downtime, you can take one action on an existing heist.

Bite the Blow

If the heist has at least one potential, take a risk to get paid 20% of the value. Reduce the potential by one.

Fence

When a heist has zero potential, take a risk to end the heist, and get paid 100% the value.

Till a Rounder

Invite another character to the heist. Each downtime, including this one, they can use their downtime to take one action.

Pay the Prigs

Add an NPC accomplice's name to the heist card. Each accomplice takes a 10% cut, but gives a -2 bonus on the ability check for risk.

Tide the Vacancy

Increase the potential by one.

Tide the Heat

Spend a downtime carousing. Reduce the heat by one, to a minimum of three.

Grease the Hamlet

Pay 1 gp. Take a risk to automatically succeed the next three risks.

2. Devotion

Only divine magic-users can perform devotion. The first time they do, they must describe the ritual they use for their devotion. If it is satisfactory, they will recieve a vision.

Then, the ritual can be repeated. Pay upto your level in gp. Certain events happen when you reach a total amount of gp devoted.

gp	Event
2	+1 HP
3	Your bandages heal +2
5	Restore a deity disfavor
7	Bestow a blessing on a willing player character: They can memorize and cast one 1st level spell from your class of your choice, but most follow the tenets of your religion.
11	Recive a quest. No more devotion until it is complete.
13	Increase an ability score by one
17	Restore a deity disfavor
19	Choose one spell. It has a 1-in-6 chance to be remembered after casting. If there are dice in the spell, increase them one size (d4 to d6 to d8) to a maximum of a d12.
23	Remove all your devotion, and destroy your ritual. When you begin anew, the prime number costs of devotion start from one prime higher (3,5,7; 5,7,11; etc).

3. Embezzlement

Only Clerics and Princesses can engage in embezzlement.

1. Vacancy

You're able to find Lvl * 20 cp to embezzle.

In addition, taxes, unclaimed inheritance, and similar transactions from previous sessions can be embezzled.

2. Laundry

Roll a d6 for each 100 cp.

- 1: Lose the money, and risk getting caught.
- 2: Lose the money, but don't take any risk.
- 3-6: Safely sequester the money into your own account.

3. Risk

Check your INT.

- Success Safely sequester 150 cp into your account.
- Failure: Caught! Perform a downtime of service for each time you have ever been caught embezzling.

4. Forging

Only Dwarves and certain Fighters can forge. Choose one option.

1. Honing

Costs 50 cp for mundane weapons, and 200 cp for magical weapons. A honed weapon deals an additional d4 damage. When rolling a 4 on that bonus, the honing fades.

Honing also restores all damage from a fragile weapon.

2. Construction

You can make any weapon, chain mail, or plate mail. See weapons and armor. Get a note card to track your progress. Calculate the total points of the weapon being constructed, based on its damage, properties, and enchantments:

Properties	Point
Chainmail	7
Platemail	11
Suitmail	13

Each downtime costs 5 cp for normal weapons, and 500 cp for enchanted weapons. Progress 1d6 points each downtime.

Up to two characters can work on the same weapon at a time.

5. Hibernate

Only animalkin can rest this deeply.

1. Healing

2-in-6 chance to cure a mundane disease or neutralize a mundane poison.

2. Dreams

Gain one rumor from a dream. 1-in-10 chance to have to battle a monster in the dream dimension. Same rules as downtime questing.

HP: Lvl * d4, AC: 10 AV: 19, Dam: 2 Reward: 200 xp + a strange item.

6. Magical Research

1. Spell Books

Only arcane magic-users can use spell books.

2. Adding To A Spell Book

Arcane magic-users can only add to their own book, and only spells on their spell list.

All spells must be identified with Read Magic, and takes one downtime per spell level.

Adding from a spell scroll costs 100 cp per spell level, and destroys the scroll. To succeed, roll a d100 under 80 + INT.

Adding from a spellbook that isn't yours costs 300 cp per spell level.

The success rate is a d100 under 50 + INT.

You can also learn a spell from a mentor, if you have one. They must be of a class and level that could learn the spell.

The chance out of 100 that your mentor knows the spell is the sum of:

- mentor level * 5
- spell level * -5

3. Creating New Spells

The player describes in detail the spell they wish to create. The referee decides if the spell can be created.

The spell must be of a level the character can cast. Research takes two downtimes and 1000 cp per spell level.

4. Creating Magic Items

Only magic-users of 9th level or higher can create magic items.

The player describes in detail the item that they wish. The Dungeon Master decides whether this is possible and, if so, what materials are required.

Divine spell casters may only create items that they are able to use themselves. Arcane spell casters may create any item except those that may only be used by divine spell casters.

Creating magic items requires rare components such as expensive gems or ingredients from rare monsters.

If duplicating the effects of a spell, construction costs one downtime and 500 cp per level of the mimicked spell, multiplied by the number of uses.

The Dungeon Master must use discretion for other items. As a general rule, items should cost from 100 to 1000gp and from 4 to 52 downtimes to complete.

Spells

I. Alphabetical Order

1. ACID ARROW

Conjures a magical arrow, and make a ranged attack against a target. The arrow deals 1d6 damage, and remains in the target for as long as you can concentrate. At the start of each round, the arrow deals an additional 1d6 damage, and you must succeed a constitution check, or have the spell end.

Wizard 2, Druid 2

2. ALTER SELF

Modify one aspect of your anatomy, such as gaining fangs, gills, or fur. Lasts until fatigued.

Wizard 2, Druid 1, Warlock 1

3. ANIMAL FRIENDSHIP

The caster touches an animal, while holding a piece of food. The animal must be

- Neutral alignment
- HD < the caster's level
- Find the food attractive

If the animal fails a magic save: the animal becomes instantly tamed, and bound to the caster as though by a Lesser Charm. However, the animal will make frequent moral checks.

Hireling: After one day, the caster must take the animal as a hireling, or end the spell.

Higher Levels: If the caster is of 4th level or higher, the spell can instead target all close animals of a species, with 1 HD or fewer.

Druid 1

4. ANIMATE DEAD

This spell turns the bones or bodies of dead creatures into undead skeletons or zombies:

- Obedient: They obey the caster's commands. They have a loyalty of 12.
- Special abilities: They are unable to use any special abilities that they possessed in life.
- Number: The spell animates a number of Hit Dice of zombies or skeletons equal to the caster's level.
- Hireling: After one day, the caster must either take the undead as hireling, or end the spell

Wizard 4, Warlock 3

5. ANTI-MAGIC SHELL

An anti-magic barrier is created around the caster. It's a 10' radius sphere. It moves with the caster. The caster must concentrate to maintain it. No spells or spell effects can pass through this barrier, whether from inside or outside. The effects of magic items and other spells are supressed while in the sphere.

Lasts until fatigued twice.

Wizard 6

6. AUGURY

The cast divines a small amount of knowlage. The caster names or describe a person, place, or object. Three statments come to their mind, 1-2 of which are true.

If cast on a magic item with a command word, and the caster fails to speak the command word, augury instead reveals a number of random letters from the command word equal to the caster's level.

Cleric 2

The caster commands a subject to preform or avoid a specific action, or charges them with a quest.

Examples: Bringin a specific item to the caster, eating or drinking without restraint, keeping a certain fact secret, rescuing a prisoner, killing a specific monster.

Impossible or deadly tasks: If an impossible or directly deadly charge instead affects the caster.

Avoidance: If the subject refuses to follow the charge, they accumulate gradual, increasing, and eventually deadly penalties.

Cleric 5, Wizard 5

12. CLAIRVOYANCE

The caster gains the ability to see through the eyes of other living creatures. To establish a connection, caster must fully concentrate for one turn. Then, the visual perceptions of the last connected creature are realyed to the caster. The caster is blind to their own vision.

Restrictions: The spell is blocked by a thin layer of lead, or by rock of 2' thick or greater. The ability lasts until fatigued twice.

Wizard 3

13. CLOUDKILL

A poisonous fog streams from the caster's fingertips, filling a zone within sight.

- Movement: Each turn, the fog moves to an adjacent zone, driven by the wind.
- Sinking: Because the fog is heavier than air, it sinks to the lowest level of the land, even pouring down den or sink hole openings.
- Damage: All creatures in contact with the vapors take 1 damage per round.
- Creatures with <5 HD: Must also make a physical save (once per round) or die.

Wizard 5

14. COMMUNE

The caster enters into direct communication with divine powers. The communion lasts three turns, where the caster must be fully concentrating.

The caster may ask three questions per casting. Once per year, they may instead ask six. Each question receives a simple yes or no answer.

Commune can only be cast once per month.

Cleric 5, Druid 5

15. CONFUSION

This spell causes creatures become charmed for 1 turn. Choose a distant zone. 3d6 subjects become charmed. Subjects are selected weakest first, and then randomly.

- Subjects of 2 HD or greater: May make a magic save each round to resist the spell's effect, acting normally each round they succeed.
- Subjects of 2 HD or lower: May not make a save.

Behavior: Roll on the table separately for each affected subject each round to determine how that subject acts:

2d6	Behavior
2-5	Behave normally
6-8	No action
9-12	Att

Wizard 4, Warlock 5

- Materials: The summons requires a large volume of the appropriate element.
- Full Concentration: Is required to command an elemental.
- Dismissing: While control over the elemental is maintained, the caster may dismiss it at any time, sending it back to its plane of origin.
- Disruption: If the caster's concentration is disturbed, the command over the elemental ends. It is, henceforth, a free willed entity and will immediately try to kill the caster and any who get in its way.

Wizard 5, Warlock 5

17. CONTACT HIGHER PLANE

The caster has can ask a powerful, otherworldly being for advice and knowledge on any subject.

Plane: The caster must choose which plane of existence to contact. Higher planes are home to more powerful and knowledgeable beings. The spell lasts one turn per level of the plane, and requires full concentration.

Questions: The caster may then ask a number of yes/no questions equal to the number of the plane contacted.

Answers: For each question asked, there is a chance of the contacted being not knowing the answer, or of answering untruthfully.

Restrictions: Contact may be cast at most once per month.

Insanity: Contact has a chance of causing insanity. Insane characters are incapable of action or communication. the recovery time is a number of weeks equal to the number of the plane. For every level of the caster above 10, this chance is reduced by 5%.

Plane	Don't Know	Truth	Insanity
3rd	75%	50%	5%
4th	70%	55%	10%
5th	65%	60%	15%

Same as continual light, but creates a sphere of magical darkness, preventing both normal sight and infravision.

Cleric 3, Wizard 2, Warlock 3

19. CONTROL WEATHER

By fully concentrating the caster can control the weather in a quarter mile radius. When concentration is broken, weather returns to normal.

This spell only functions outdoors.

REVERSED: CONTROL EARTH

Earth (but not stone) within within a quarter mile, that the caster can see, is rearranged as the caster wishes.

Movement rate: The caster can move earth in the area at up to 60' per turn.

Excavations: The range of the spell also extends downwards, allowing excavations to be made.

Wizard 6, Druid 5

20. CREATE FOOD

The caster reaches into an empty sack. From it, they magically produce food for twelve humans and twelve mounts for one day.

Higher level casters: If the caster is higher than 8th level, food sufficient for an additional 12 humans and mounts is produced for each level beyond 8th.

REVERSED: DESTROY FOOD

The same amount of food crumbles to dust.

Cleric 5

21. CREATE WATER

The caster touches a large stone surface, such as a wall or boulder. A magical font appears from that spot. It produces approximeately 50 gallons of water.

Higher level casters: If the caster is 9th level or higher, an additional 50 gallons is created for each level above 8th.

REVERSED: DESTROY WATER

The spell instead creates a magical drain, which destroys 50 gallons (or more) of water. It remains for one day or until it destroys the maximum amount of water. Creatures made of water, such as elentals take 1d8 damage per gallon drained.

Cleric 4, Druid 2

22. CURE POISON AND DISEASE

Cure a touched subject of any poison or disease, inluding those of magical origin. A creature killed by poison can be revieved within 1 turn. If the subject is a green slime, it is instead killed instantly.

REVERSED: CAUSE DISEASE

Before casting the spell, use wax to draw matching symbols on two mirrors of similar size. You must use the spell within one day per caster level of drawing the symbols. The two mirrors become linked portals to eachother. Lasts for one turn per caster level.

Wizard 3, Warlock 2

67. OBSCURING MIST

A cloud of misty vapor emanates from the ground, filling the air close to the caster. The mist is 10' high and blocks vision, including infravision.

The caster can see faintly through the mist.

Lasts one turn per level. Winds reduce the spell's duration by three quarters (minimum one turn).

REVERSED: CLEAR MIST

The area around the caster has mist pushed out by a gentle breeze, enabling clear vision, while close to the caster.

Lasts until fatigued

Druid 2

68. PART WATER

The caster creates a path 10' wide and a maximum of 120' long through water, such as a pond, lake, or other body. Lasts six turns. The caster can dismiss the spell's effect before the duration ends.

Cleric 5

69. PASS-WALL

The caster touches solid stone. A 5' diameter hole is temporarily opened, forming a passage-way up to 10' deep.

After a shift, the passage seals, without a trace.

Wizard 5

70. PHANTASMAL FORCE

A visual illusion of the caster's choosing manifests in a 20' cube area, within sight. Three types of illusions may be created:

- An illusionary monster: That can be directed to attack. The monster has an Armour Class of 9 and will vanish if hit in combat.
- An illusionary attack: For example, an avalanche, a falling ceiling, a magic missile, etc. Targets who save versus spells are unaffected.
- A scene: Either changing the appearance of the affected area or creating the appearance of something new. The scene disappears if touched.

Restrictions: The following apply:

- Full concentration
- Illusionary monsters or attacks: May appear to be harmful but no real damage is ever inflicted. A character who appears to die actually falls unconscious, a character turned to stone will actually be paralyzed, and so on. Such effects last for 1d4 turns.

Wizard 2

71. POLYMORPH

A creature is changed into another type of creature, as chosen by the caster:

- HD: The new form may not have more Hit Dice than the subject.
- Damage: The subject retains the same amount of damage.
- Abilities: The subject truly becomes the new form: all special abilities are acquired, along with behavioral patterns, tendencies, and intelligence.
- Specific individuals: The spell cannot be used to duplicate a specific individual.
- Stats: If cast on themselve, the caster retains their own intelligence, hit points, saving throws, but gains the strength, attacks, and AV of the new form. Otherwise, the subject gains all stats of the new form.
- Casting spells: While polymorphed, the subject is unable to cast spells.
- Reversion: If the subject dies, it returns to its original form.

Lasts until fatigued twice.

If the caster is of at least 10th level, they may choose to have the spell never end.

Wizard 4

72. PORTANT

Ask the dungeon master about a specific course of action. The dungeon master describes the likely results of the action as either "wheel" or "woe".

Cleric 1, Druid 1, Warlock 1

73. PROJECTED IMAGE

An illusory duplicate of the caster appears within range. Lasts for six turns.

- Duplicate: The image is an exact duplicate of the caster that can only be differentiated by touch.
- Subsequent spells cast: Appear to originate from the image. (Targets must still be visible to the caster, however.)
- Spells and missiles: The image appears unaffected by spells or missile weapons.
- Melee or touch: If the image is touched or hit in melee, it disappears.
- Range: The image must remain distant or closer to the caster.

Wizard 6

74. PROTECTION FROM CHAOS

Wards the caster or a touched creature from chaotic creatures and magic. Grants -1 to saves and dodges.

REVERSED: PROTECTION FROM LAW

Provides the same ward against law.

Cleric 1, Wizard 1, Warlock 3

75. PROTECTION FROM CHAOS 10' RADIUS

Wards the caster and all creatures with in a 10' radius from chaotic creatures and magic. Grants -1 to saves and dodges.

REVERSED: PROTECTION FROM LAW 10' RADIUS

Provides the same ward against law.

Cleric 4, Wizard 3

76. PROTECTION FROM FIRE

All creatures in the same zone as the caster are warded against fire:

- Normal Heat: unharmed by mundane heat or fire.
- Save bonus: -2 bonus to saves versus fire based magic and breath attacks.
- Fire-based damage: is reduced by 1 per die rolled.

Lasts until fatigued.

REVERSED: PROTECTION FROM COLD

Protects from cold and ice instead of heat and fire.

Cleric 2, Druid 3

77. PURIFY FOOD AND WATER

Makes spoiled, rotten, poisonous, or otherwise contaminated foor and water pure and suitable for eating. Affects 6 quarts of fluid, one ration, or 12 people's worth of unpreserved food.

Cleric 1

78. RAISE DEAD

A corpse is restored to live. They must not have been dead for no longer than four days per level of the caster above 7th. The ritual takes 3 turns, and requires 5000 cp of insense and other supplies. This spell can not revive elves because they do not have souls.

Alternetivly, the spell instantly destroys a single undead monster.

REVERSED: FINGER OF DEATH

Directs a ray of deadly magic at a single target. If the target fails a physical saving throw, it dies instantly.

Cleric 5

79. READ LANGUAGES

The caster may understand any written language, including muncane codes, maps, and othjer written instructions. This spell does not grant any ability to speak nor listen to unknown languages.

Lasts until fatigued.

REVERSED: REMOVE LANGAGES

Cause one subject to loos the ability to speak or understand langauge. Lasts until fatigued.

Wizard 1, Warlock 4

80. READ MAGIC

Allows the caster to understand magical writing for one turn. They can identify spell scrolls, spell books, and other magical runes and inscriptions. Once read, the caster is able to read that particular writing without the use of a spell.

Wizard 1

81. REINCARNATION

A dead character is returned to life in a new physical form that manifests in the presence of the caster. The character's new body is not necessarily the same as the original; it is determined by rolling on the Reincarnated Class table. The roll indicates either a character class or a monster:

The character is of experience level 1d6 lower than they were in life. There is a 2-in-6 chance they are the same class, a 1-in-6 chance they are a different human class, 2-in-6 they are a different demihuman class, and a 1-in-6 chance they are instead a monster of the same alighnment and number if hit dice.

REVERSED: DEATH SPELL

Choose a zone within 240'. Up to 4d8 Hit Dice of creatures make a physical save or die, instantly. Undead and creatures with >7 HD are unaffected.

Wizard 6

82. REMOVE CURSE

Instantly remove one harmful magical effect from a touched creature.

REVERSED: CURSE

Places a deleterious effect on a touched creature or object. The effects of the curse are determined by the caster. Maximum possible effects include:

- +2 penalty to saves.
- +4 penalty to AC and AV.
- Reducing an ability score by 50%
- Unablle to put down or unequip the item.

Cleric 3, Wizard 4, Warlock 3

83. REMOVE FEAR

The touched creature is calmed and warded against fear. Magically induced fear is dispelled.

Lasts until fatigued

REVERSED: CAUSE FEAR

A chosen creature becomes overwhelmed with fear and begins to flee.

Lasts until fatigued.

Cleric 1

84. SEE INVISIBLE

The caster can see invisible creatures and items in the same zone.

Lasts until fatigued.

Wizard 2, Druid 1

85. SHADOW HOUND

A dog made of black smoke appears before the caster. It obeys all spoken orders with absolute obedience until it is destroyed.

Lasts until fatigued.

Wizard 3

86. SHADOW HOUND

A dog made of black smoke appears before the caster. It obeys all spoken orders with absolute obedience until it is destroyed.

The dog dissappers when fatigued.

Warlock 1

87. SHIELD

Creates a field of force that protects the caster for two turns. The shield is nearly invisible, appearing like spider silk or polished glass.

- Against missile attacks: The caster's AC is 2.
- Against other attacks: The caster's AC is 4.
- Against Magic: Breath attacks and magic that allow a save for half damage, instead deal no damage with a successful save.
- Against Magic Missile: Shield will completely prevent Magic Missile.,

Wizard 1, Warlock 4

88. SILENCE

A zone is magicall silenced. Converation and spell casting are impossible. Noise from outside the area can be heard by those within it.

Lasts until fatigued twice.

Cleric 2, Warlock 2

89. SLEEP

A sleep spell causes a magical slumber for 4d4 turns. The spell may target either:

- A single creature with 4 HD,
- A total of 2d8 HD of creatures of 3 HD or lower each.

Undead are unaffected. Targets do not get a save versus spells.

When targeting multiple creatures, sleep targets creatures with the least HD are first. Rolled HD not sufficient to affect a creature are wasted.

Creatures enchanted by this spell are helpless and can be killed instantly with a bladed weapon. Slapping or wounding awakens an affected creature.

Wizard 1

90. SPEAK WITH ANIMALS

The caster gains the ability to speak with animals. This doesn't make the animals any more friendly or cooperative than normal.

Lasts until fatigued.

Cleric 2, Druid 1

91. SPEAK WITH DEAD

The caster gains the ability to speak with corpses and undead. This doesn't make them any more friendly or cooperative than they would have been in life.

Lasts until fatigued. Burning incense while talking with the dead will give you a +1 reaction modifier with them.

Wizard 3, Warlock 2, Druid 4

92. SPEAK WITH PLANTS

The caster gains the ability to speak with plants and fungi, including monsterous plants/fungi. This doesn't make the plants any more friendly or cooperative than normal.

Lasts until fatigued.

Druid 2

93. SPEAK WITH STONES

The caster gains the ability to speak with stones, including animated statues and earth elementals. This doesn't make the plants any more friendly or cooperative than normal.

Lasts until fatigued.

Druid 5

94. STICKS TO SNAKES

2d8 normal sticks are miraculously transformed into snakes that follow their caster's orders. When killed or the spell ends, they revert to sticks.

Poison: There is a 50% chance of the snakes being poisonous.

Lasts until fatigued

Cleric 4

95. STONE TO FLESH

This spell transforms stone into living flesh. It is especially useful for restoring life to a petrified creature and its equipment to its normal state.

REVERSED: FLESH TO STONE

Turns one creature into a statue, including all gear and any items currently held.

Cleric 5, Wizard 6

96. STRIKING

One weapon is enchanted to deal an additional 1d6 damage, and becomes a magical weapon. Lasts until fatigued.

Cleric 3, Warlock 3

97. SUMMON ANIMALS

The caster spends one turn drawing non-magical animals with chalk. Then the drawings come to life as conjured animals. They can conjure animals with total hit dice equal to the casters level. Small animals, such as mice or sparrows, count as 1/10th of a hd.

Summoned creatures: Behave as follows:

- Comprehension: They understand the caster's words while the spell lasts.
- Aid: They will aid the caster in whatever way they can. If the caster is being attacked: The summoned animals will attack the enemy, only fleeing if they fail a morale check.

The anmals will disapper when out of sight. All animals begin fleeing after a shift.

Druid 4

98. SUPREME CURE WOUND

A touched creature heals 4d6+4

Cleric 4

99. TELEKINESIS

The caster concentrates for up to six rounds. During that time, they are able to mentally move objects or creatures within a long distance.

- Weight: Up to 2 item slots, or 50 lb, per level of the caster may be moved at once.
- Movement: The target may be moved up to 2 squares per round, in whatever direction the caster wishes

Wizard 5

100. TELEPATHY

Grants the caster the ability to perceive and understand the thoughts of other creatures. When the spell begins, the caster is assaulted by the thoughts of all creatures distant or closer. They are incomprehensible, but reveal the location of the creature.

By fully concentrating on single creature, the caster can perceive and understand that creatures thoughts.

The thoughts of magical creatures may be dangerous. Lasts one turn per level

Obstructions: The ability to perceive thoughts is obstructed by a thin layer of lead or by rock of 2' thick or greater.

Wizard 2

101. TELEPORT

A touched creature disappears and reappears at a location of the caster's choosing, including its gear

The destination may be at any distance, but must be known to the caster. The destination must be an open space at ground level. (It is not possible to intentionally teleport the subject into mid-air or into solid matter.)

There is a risk of accidentally arriving above or below ground level. The chance of a successful teleportation depends on the caster's knowledge of the destination (see right). Roll d% and consult the table

Know. of Dest.	Ground Level	Too High	Too Low
Scant 01-50	51-75	76-00
Medium 01-80	81-90	91-00
Exact 01-95	96-99	0

- Ground level: The subject appears at the desired destination.
- Too high: The subject appears 1d10×10' above the intended destination. Should this location already be occupied by solid matter, the subject is instantly killed. Otherwise, the subject falls from a height.
- Too low: The subject appears in the ground and is killed instantly.

Knowledge of destination: The caster's knowledge of the destination is rated as follows:

- Scant: A location that the caster has visited once or twice, has seen by magical scrying, or has heard of from descriptions.
- Moderate: A location that the caster has visited often or has studied via scrying for several weeks.
- Exact: A location that the caster has made a detailed study of, in person

Wizard 5

102. TREE SHAPE

The caster takes on the form of a living or dead tree. The tree form is completely realistic, even to close inspection. While in this form, the caster can perceive the surroundings with their normal senses. The caster may end the spell at will, returning to their normal form.

Druid 3

103. VENTRILOQUISM

The caster may make their voice appear to come from another location or source (e.g. a statue or animal).

Lasts until fatigued.

Wizard 1

104. WALL OF FIRE

An immobile, opaque curtain of fire springs into existence. It remains as long as the caster fully concentrates.

- The wall can be any size, shape, and dimensions the caster desires, up to 1,200 sq. ft. The wall may not appears where objects are.
- Monsters with <4 HD cannot pass the wall of flames. Monsters with ≥4 HD take 1d6 hit points of damage when they pass through the wall. The wall deals double damage to undead creatures or creatures that use cold or are accustomed to cold.

REVERSED: WALL OF ICE

An immobile, translucent, wall of ice springs into existence. Functions the same as wall of fire with the following changes:

- Damage: extra damage is dealt to creatures that use fire or are accustomed to fire.
- Concentration: The wall does not require concentration, instead it melts partly after two shifts, and completely after three, unless it is in a cold area.

Wizard 4, Druid 5

105. WALL OF STONE

A wall of solid rock appears. The wall may be of whatever shape the caster desires and is of 1,000 cubic feet in volume. (For example, a 2' thick wall, 50' long and 10' high.) The wall must rest upon a solid surface and may not be evoked so that it appears where objects are.

REVERSED: WALL OF AIR

The wall functions the same as the wall of stone, but is made of an invisible air current. It lasts until fatigued twice.

Wizard 5, Druid 5

106. WARP WOOD

Wooden objects of the caster's choice warp and become useless. One small object is affected per level of the caster. Or, one large object may also be targeted- the dungeon master will determine a chance of failure depending on how large the object is.

Magical objects have a chance of being unaffected. Creatures may save versus spells to prevent their held objects from being warped.

Druid 3

107. WATER BREATHING

A touched creature can breathe water freely by means of this spell.The spell does not affect the subject's ability to breathe air. No additional proficiency at swimming is granted

Lasts one day.

REVERSED: AIR BREATHING

Allows a subject to breath air. No additional walking ability is granted.

Wizard 3, Warlock 4, Druid 3

108. WATER BREATHING 10' RADIUS

The caster, and all creatures within 10' of them can breathe water freely. If a subject leaves the radius, they loose water breathing until they reenter it. The spell does not affect the subject's ability to breathe air. No additional proficiency at swimming is granted

Lasts one day.

REVERSED: AIR BREATHING

Allows a subject to breath air. No additional walking ability is granted.

Wizard 4

109. WEB

Conjures a many-layered mass of strong, sticky threads, blocking up to a 10' area. The web has an AC of 9, and 10 HP.

Entanglement: Creatures caught within a web become entangled among the gluey fibres. Entangled creatures are restrained, but can make attacks against the web.

Flammable: The strands of the web are flammable and can be destroyed by fire in two rounds. All creatures caught within flaming webs suffer 1d6 damage from the flames.

Wizard 2, Druid 1

110. WIZARD EYE

One of the casters eyes pops harmlessly out of their head. It becomes transparent, nearly invisible and begins to fly.

- Movement: The eye is mentally directed by the caster. It can be moves up to 120' per turn, and up to 240' total from the caster. Solid barriers block passage, but it can pass through a hole or space as small as 1 inch in diameter
- Seeing through the eye: By concentrating, the caster can see through the eye, but becomes blind to their own vision.
- Types of vision: The magical eye grants both normal vision and infravision.

When the caster becomes fatigued, the eye floats slowly to the ground. If not placed in the casters head within 1 turn, the eye is destroyed.

Wizard 4

111. WIZARD LOCK

A wizard lock spell magically locks a touched door, gate, or any item that has a lock or latch. The magical lock is permanent but may be temporarily bypassed as follows:

- Password: The caster may speak a password at the time of casting. Speaking the password disables the lock for one round.
- A Knock spell: Disables the lock for one round.

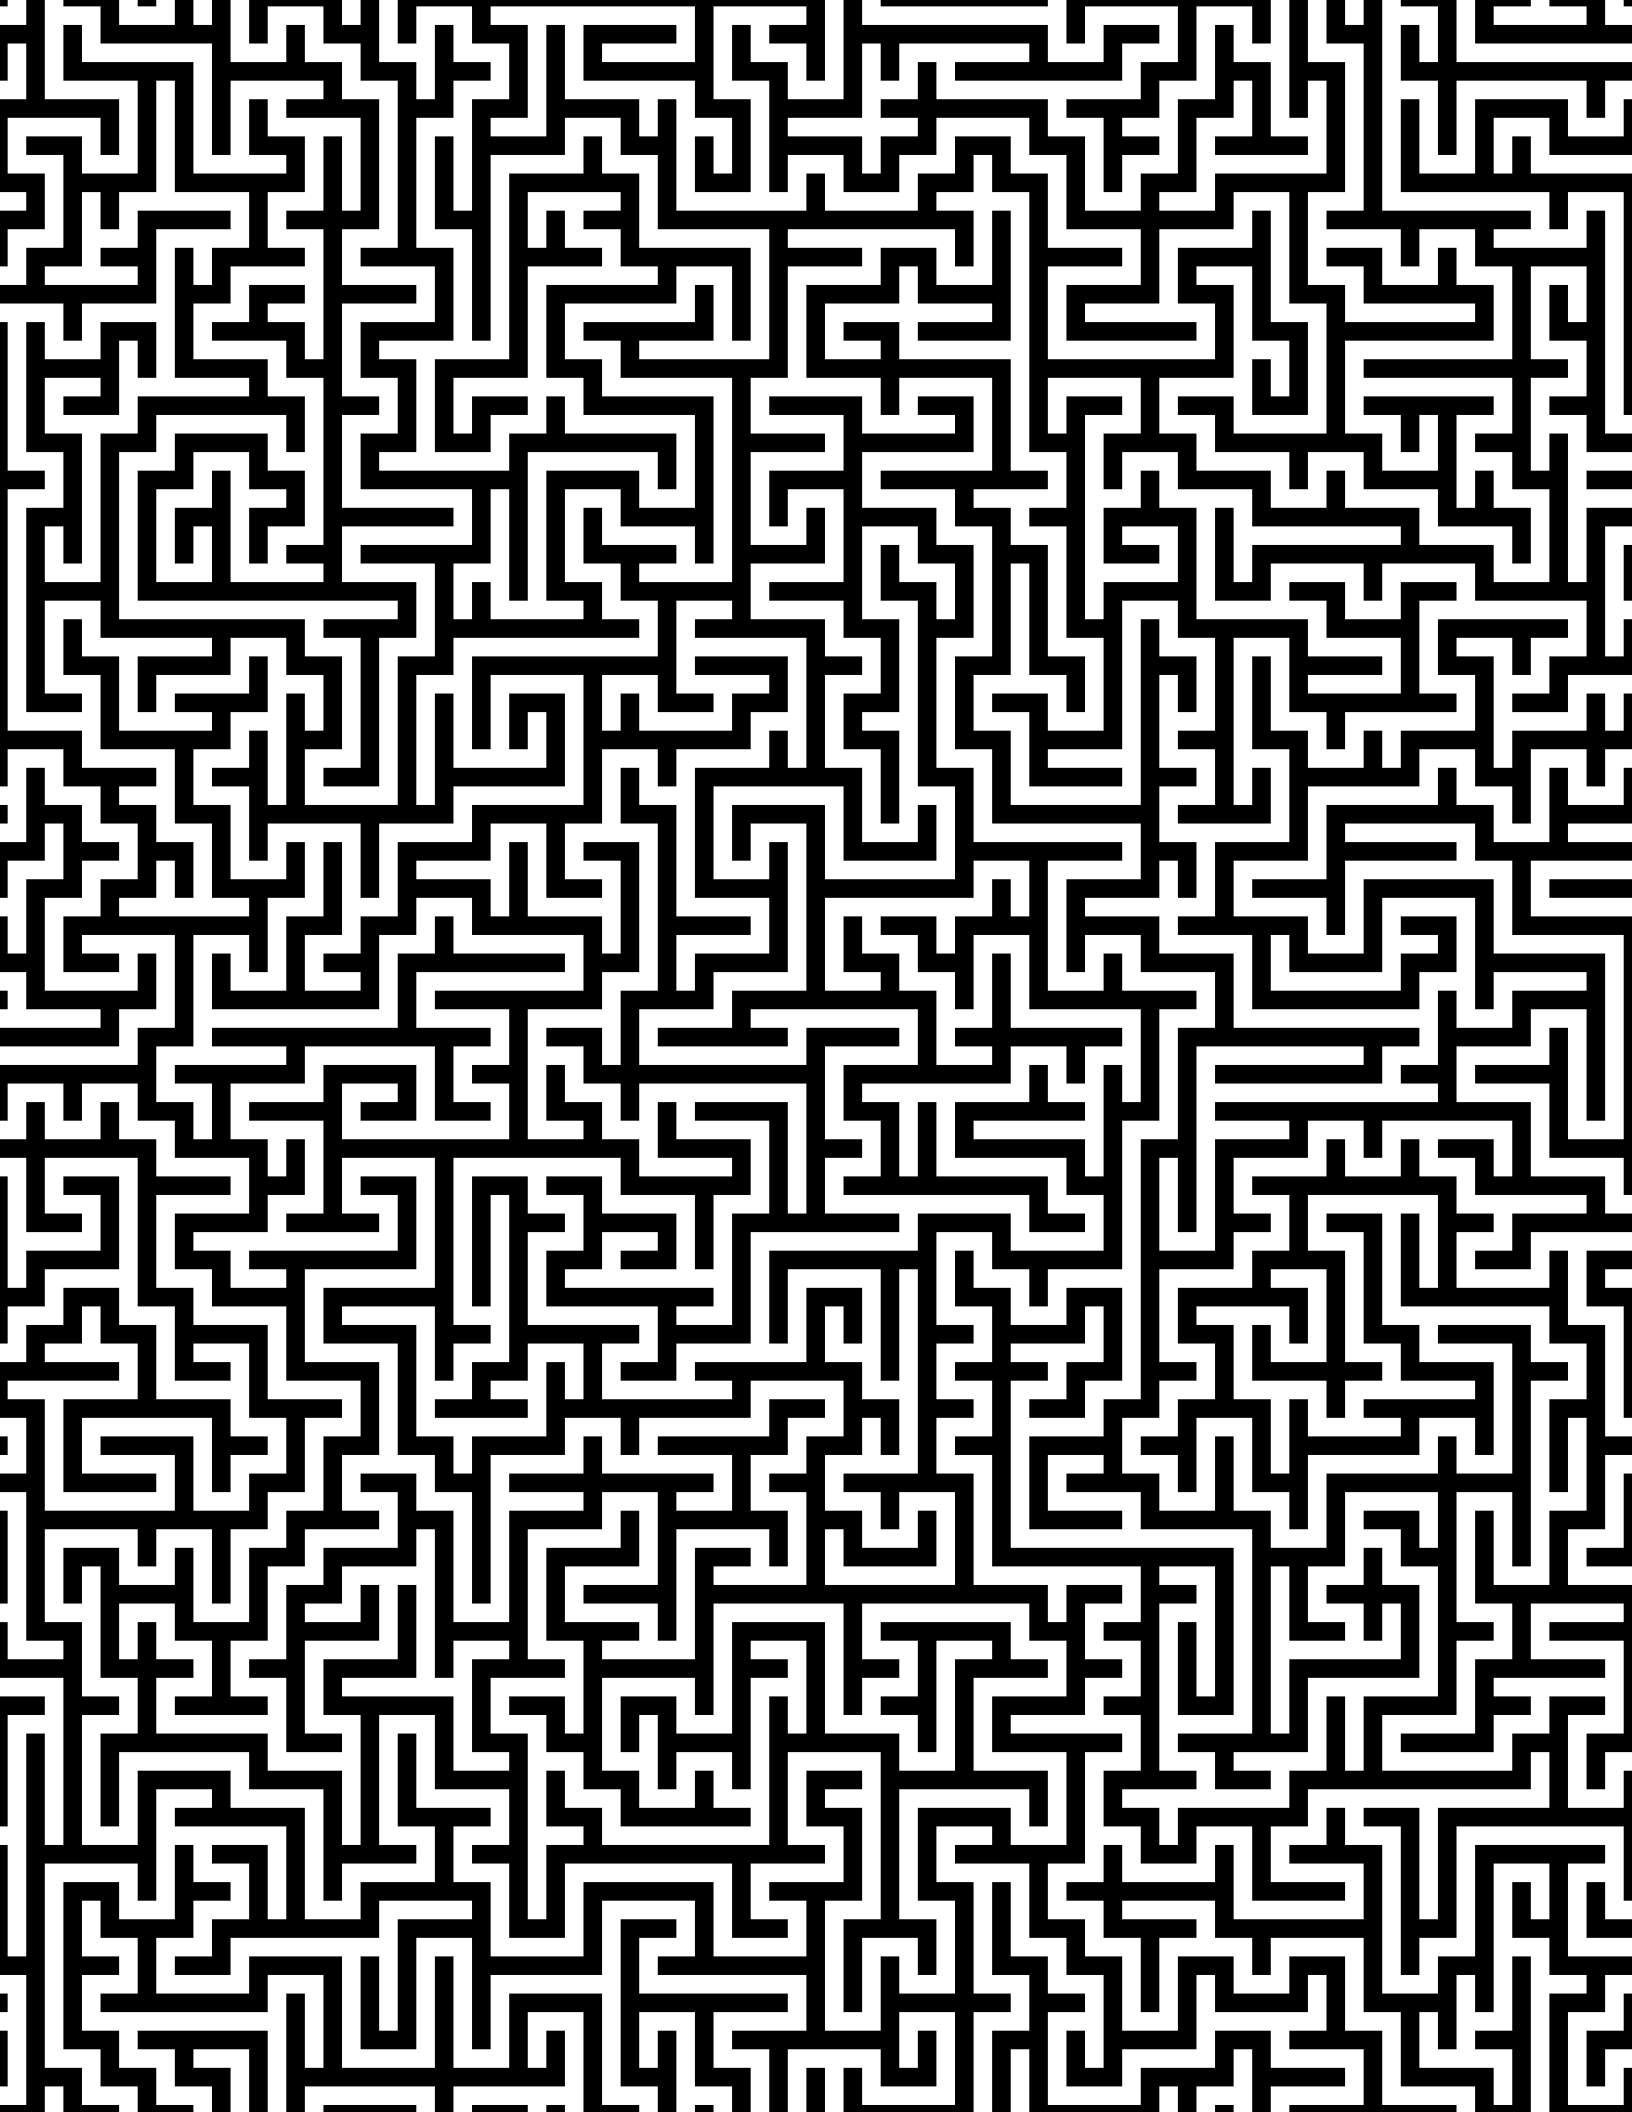
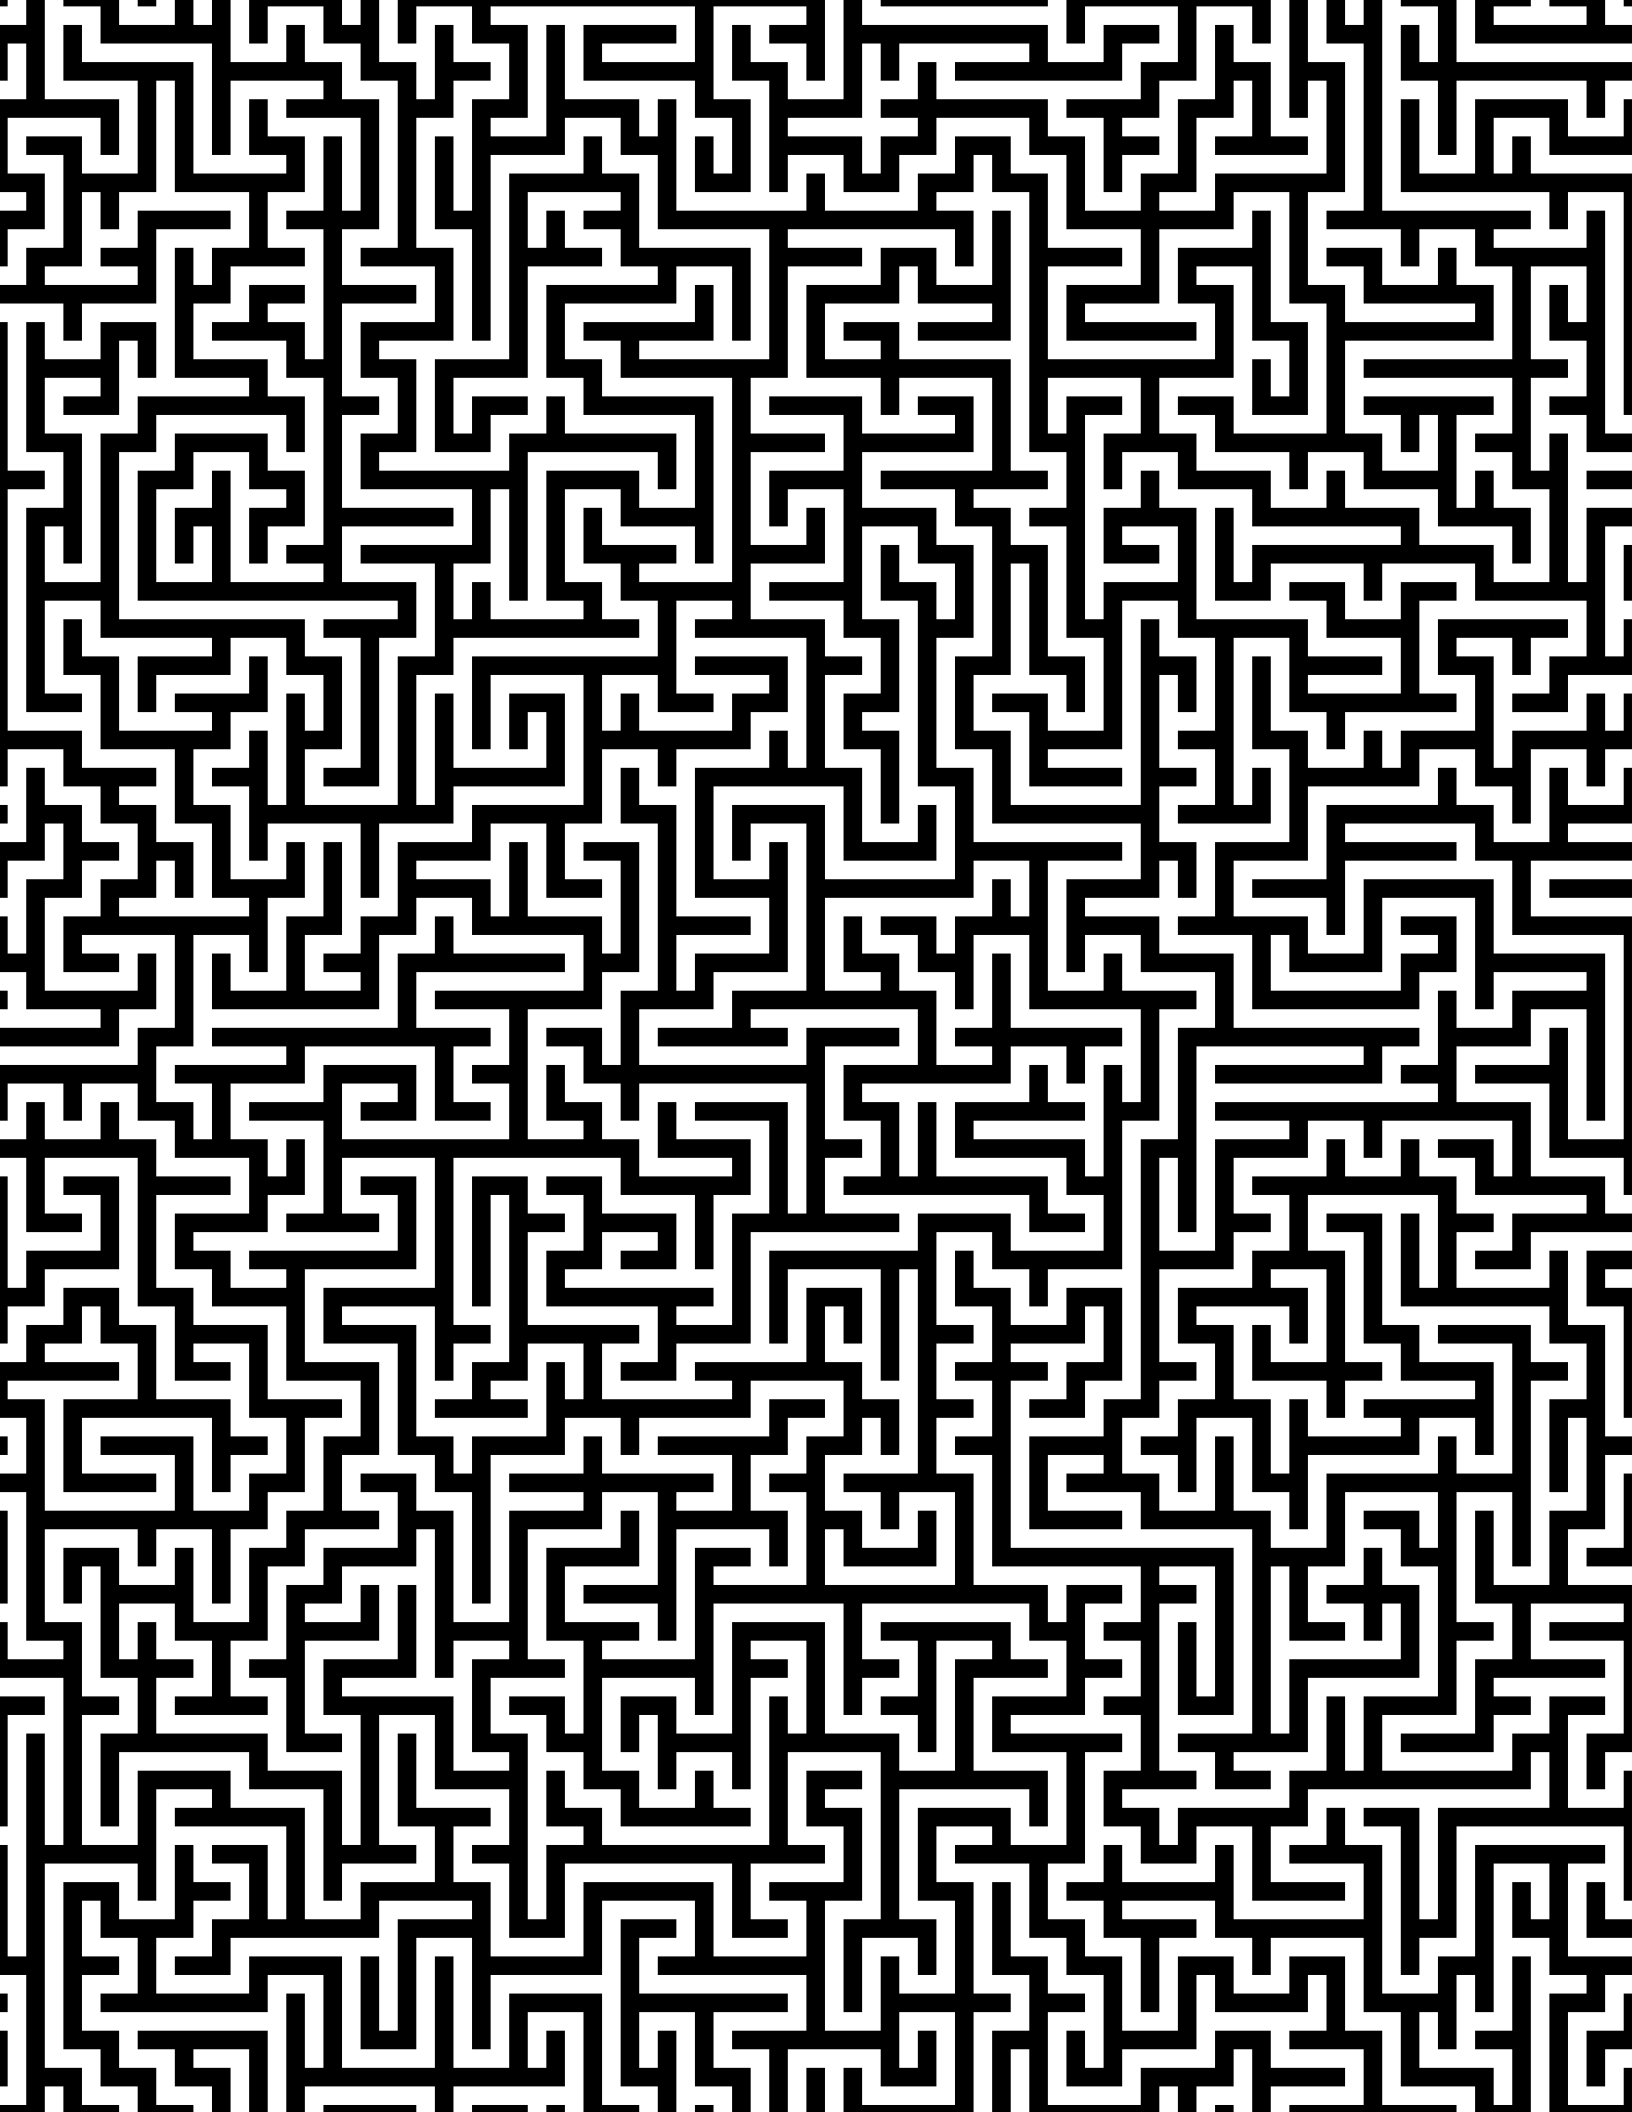
Higher level casters: Any magic-using character who is at least 3 levels higher than the caster of the wizard lock may pass through unimpeded.

Wizard 2





5e Introduction

At present, the most popular TTRPG is D&D 5.5e. As such, its nescesary to addess the differences of YABEC and the expectations many players bring to the table.

To sum it up: YABEC is not just a new set of mechanics, but also a different style of play. 5.5e lends itself towards a neo-trad style of play: roleplay as powerful heros, with detailed personalities and backstories. Conversely, the OSR style of play focuses on challange and exploration.

1. XP For Treasure

Advancement is linked primerally to collecting treasure. Not milestones, not story beats, not slautering enemies.

2. Character Death

Combat is not "balanced"; its war. Lethally dangerous enemies are on every level of the dungeon. Traps may impose instant death. Players have few hit points, and healing is limited. We get to know the characters if they survive.

3. Vancian Magic

Magic is rare and limited. There are no cantrips or free spells. Magic requires hours of study. Casters need to plan a head to carefully choose what spells to bring into the adventure.

4. Simple Characters

There are no feats or species options. Characters have class, equipment, and some scores. The amount of equipment characters can carry is limited because equipment is powerful.

History

1. War Games

In the days of yore, aristocracy developed games to simulate battlefield strategy, such as chess. By the 1950's, war gaming had developed, attempting to accurately recreate great battles, such as those of the Napoleonic wars, using painted miniatures and dice.

In 1969, in the Twin Cities, David Westly invited several people over for a novel, multi-objective game set in the fictional German town of Braustein. Unlike other games at the time, it had individual and non-military roles, such as mayor and university chancellor. Nearly 20 players showed up for the game, forcing Westly to improvise.

Although Westly initially considered the game a failure, four additional sessions were run him and Dave Arneson. When Westly departed for the army in 1970, Arneson began a fantasy game set in the medieval Blackmoor. Players quested for magic and gold, and vanquished the forces of evil. As part of this game, he borrowed from Chainmail...

Influenced by several other war games, Gary Gygax and Jeff Perren developed a miniature wargame called Chainmail, which first saw print through Guidon Games in 1971. It included a 14 page fantasy supplement, drawing from the works of Tolkien, and Moorcock.

Gygax worked with Arneson to publish a version of his Blackmoor game. In 1974, Tactical Studies Rules published the first edition of Dungeons and Dragons. This first "brown book" edition is the first published TTRPG. TSR, then operated out of Gygax's bacement, suddenly found huge market success, and went to publish many, many games.

2. Dungeons And Dragons™

Some of the challenges faced by TSR were: the limitations of publishing technology at the time, the limited ability of game writing methods, the lack of knowledge the public had of the unique game, and many others.

The brown book, and its expansions (sometimes called "0e"), where notoriously hard to understand (leading to many other adventure games, including Tunnels and Trolls). TSR tasked Dr Holmes with writing an introductory game, published in 1977. This is known as the "blue book", Holmes Basic, or Basic Set 1st version. It only covered 1st to 3rd level and had simplified rules. TSR editors also may have included portions of the yet unreleased AD&D into it.

AD&D was made for a bunch of reasons. The player's handbook, with it's iconic statue gem eye stealing artwork, was published in 1978. Is significant for being the first edition published solely under Gygax's name as he and Arneson had a falling out. (Arneson went on to have various other contributions to RPG culture, and computer education). It also includes Gygax's new philosophy on what D&D should be. Most people improvised most of the game, (just as Westly had). However, as D&D was become a product line of various expansions, adventures, licensed products, and even a competitive circuit. Gygax sought to write a rules system which could unambiguously cover every possible situation.

The boundaries of AD&D 1e are ambiguous and debated. Some people site Unearthed Arcana and Oriental Adventures as being a 1.5e, as they were so different. Regardless, AD&D 1e was published from 1977 until 1989, and is the beginning of the "Classic" culture of play.

> Fun Fact: Some versions were unable to include dice due to supply shortages. They instead included "chits". They were small pieces of wood, plastic, or even paper. The chits would be placed in an opaque bag, and one could be randomly selected to produce random numbers.

However, the Holmes Basic set had already introduced many players to the game, who either refused to switch to AD&D, or adopted it's content ad hot. To support the Basic D&D system, a 1977 product extended the game unto 14th level. It was edited by Tom Moldvay, Frank Mentzer, and Troy Denning. It had two books: "basic" which was levels 1-3, and "expert" using levels 4 through 14. This system became known as Moldvay Basic, or Basic Set 2nd version. It featured several iconic dragon images (the 1981 version being the most iconic). It's somewhat different than Holmes Basic, and very different from AD&D. Later versions came bundled with In Search of the Unknown, or The Keep on The Borderland.

To further complicate the BD&D super-system, TSR later published the Basic Set 3rd version. These books took on a different approach to teaching the game as choose-your-own-adventure book. This system was published over five books: Basic, Expert, Companion, Master, and Immortal. It went up to level 36, and is known as BECMI Basic.

> Dungeons and Dragons has become the Kleenex of Table Top Role Playing Games. It's perspectives, biases, and problems dominate the space, even to this day.
> Some other titter pigs of note are:
> Tunnels and Trolls published by Flying Buffalo in 1975 was the first TTRPG not published by TSR.
> Dragon Warriors published by Corgi Books in 1985 was the first TTRPG to use slots for inventory.
> Metamophis Alpha (1976) was the first sci-fi TTRPG, and Superhero: 2044 (1977) was the first superhero TTRPG. LARP also developed sometime in the 1970s.
> Call of Cthulhu (1981) was based on Basic Role-Playing (1980), and is the first game with the written intent to create the experience of a horror story. This is one of the first games targeting the "Traditional" culture of play. Computer RPGs, such as Rogue (1980) were also published, often as directed adaptations of their programmers' D&D games.

The Satanic Panic happened in the mid 80s, and had a huge impact on gaming culture. For example, many TSR books have "Ten'ari, instead of demons.
the Dominion Rules published in 1999 was the first open source rules.

3. Edition Wars

In 1989, TSR was publishing and licensing Advanced Dungeons and Dragons, which spread across a dozen books. They also published Basic Dungeons and Dragons, which confusingly included "expert", but not "advanced". To remedy this, second edition, or 2e, was released. The best reference for this system is the 1991 Rules Cyclopedia.

By 1997, TSR was nearly bankrupt, and was purchase by Wizards of the Coast, which was and is owned by multi-national scum-lord Hasbro. They published 3e in 2000. This saw the introduction of the iconic d20 system, and the Open Game License. They also had the amazing idea to sell more books by publishing hundreds of character options. This resulted in an unmanageable 200 books in the system, and characters being ungodly combos of desperate options, which took hours to assemble.

Trouble started in 2008 with the release of 4th edition, which was received negatively.

Some people liked 3e. They largely stayed with it, or switched to games like Pathfinder, which further developed the tactical culture of play.

Some people instead played narrative games, such as Apocalypse World. These games place story first, rather than game play, and focus one rules that align with their desired fiction.

However, some people began to try and play games like that volatile, diverse period of the 1980s...

4. Old-School Renaissance

The various TSR games were still around, and distributed widely on the internet. However, they are dated, difficult to read, and have various innate problems. Retro games, such as HackMaster (2001) and Castles & Crusades (2004) were became popular. Then came games targeting a romanticized view of the 80s, such as Labyrinth Lord (2007).

Zines and blogs began discussing the OSR, and making contributions. Drive Through RPG supported indie publishers with digital and on-demand printing.

Other nugen games include the Black Hack, Knave, Morg Borg, GLOG, and Cairn.

YABEC owes much of it's heritage to Old-School Essentials, and by extension Moldvey Basic. OSE, written by Gavin Norman and published by Necrotic Gnome, is a TTRPG ecosystem aiming to be faithful to the le games, while using modern game writing.

YABEC also inherits significantly from the blog culture and it's many GLOG hacks. The goblin laws of gaming aim to be rules light, hackable, and brutal. They're mostly distributed via blogs, and Google Docs.

Appendix A - Additional Notes

1. Modification

The book is meant to act as a standard reference for how the Dungeon Master makes rulings. While the Dungeon Master's call is ultimently final, its recommended to stick to the book, and later change unsatisfactory rules. Yabec is open source, and available on Github.

If players don't like the rules, they should begin a conversation about how they would like the rule, and the kind of game they are interested in playing. When an agreement is made, it should be reflected in the book. If they have other games they are interested in playing, they should also bring those to the conversation. /gen

The book also acts as a suggest stock of rulings. If the Dungeon Master should be able to appeal to the book, and get a simple but opinionated rule. The new rule should not disrupt the flow of play, but rather maintain it. If the rule turns unfun, it should be ammended via the above process.

2. Metagaming Comment

I have a lax approach to metagaming. Any info gained during the session is valid, including;

- Info from dead characters.
- Deduced AC and Hit Dice.

What would be metagaming would be searching the internet for answers, or reading the adventure source books.

This comment is meant to give the superflous mechanical permision to do this.

3. Appendix B - The West Marches

Life in the walled city is safe. Beyond its barrier is the WEST MARCHES, where monsters roam and acient treasure lay.

West marches is a style of play. There is an open fantasy world, maintained by one or more dungeon masters. Players organize freely into adventuring parties, exploring where they may. At least three players are needed to run, but ideally four to six. Dungeon mastes may be prepared to run for as many as a dozen players. Players should be enterprising, conspiring to meet and secure valuable treasure,sharing bits of lore and secrets with eachother.
